Sunken Chlorine Barge Located Near LSU Campus

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) - A sunken barge containing 600 tons of lethal chlorine was located Thursday in the Mississippi River near the Louisiana State University campus.

Navy divers positively identified the sunken craft as the one which touched off a large-scale search when it was reported missing last Sunday in the aftermath of Hurricane Betsy.

Army Engineers, who said they were acting under orders from the White House, waited until 11:45 p.m. to announce the discovery.

Shipping in the busy Mississippi was immediately reopened.

"The barge is safe, and there is no danger of any kind," said Col. Thomas J. Bowen, Army district engineer.

Meanwhile, the clean-up from Betsy, which unleashed death and destruction on Louisiana a week ago, went on throughout the stricken areas. A few sections remained under water. Two more bodies were found in New Orleans, raising the known dead to 70 - plus 12 in other states.

More than 10,000 persons remain homeless in the New Orleans area.

Snow Storm Blows Itself Out In West

A late summer snowstorm, with winter's bitter elements of blowing and drifting snow, cold, ice and blustery winds, diminished across wide areas in the northern and central Rockies and adjacent Plains states today.

The U.S. Weather Bureau said that snow tapered off in most areas, except in some mountain sections, during the early morning. Strong winds continued in the storm belt and in most other western sections of the nation. But forecasters said the worst of the wintry weather appeared ended. Clear skies were reported in Montana for the first time in a week.

The Weather Bureau said the storm was one of the worst in history for September.

Snow piled up to 18 inches in the Whitefish, Mont., area near the Canadian border. The snow blanket measured 15 inches at Crawford, in western Nebraska.

At least five persons were killed in traffic accidents, three in Montana and two in Wyoming, on ice-covered highways.

Blowing snow caused four-foot drifts in central Montana. The Trail Ridge Highway, the world's highest continuous motor vehicle route in the Rocky Mountain National Park 80 miles northwest of Denver, was closed by drifting and ice glaze.

Duke Ellington Plays Concert In Cathedral

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A sellout crowd of 3,000 — paying up to $25 a seat — toe-tapped and applauded noisily as jazz pianist Duke Ellington played his form of church music in Grace Cathedral.

The Negro musician, saying "God has blessed" his career, played Thursday night for an audience which included the Rt. Rev. James A. Pike, Episcopal bishop of California, and members of San Francisco society.

"Duke Ellington has been endowed by God with the gift of genius," said the Very Rev. Julian Bartlett, dean of the Episcopal Cathedral on Nob Hill. "He and his company of artists make an offering to God of this concert."

Ellington, 66, played on a simple, temporary wooden platform behind the cathedral's impressive stone altar. He called the performance his "most important statement."

Ellington was backed by a group of 20, many of them jazz stars in their own right, such as Harry Carney, baritone saxaphone; Paul Gonsalves, tenor saxaphone, and Louie Bellson, drums. The group included vocalists and a dancer.

Most of the selections were Ellington's own compositions, including "New World a'Coming," the hit of the evening; "David Danced Before The Lord With All His Might," and "My People," his musical history of Negro people.

Mama America Easy To Spot In History Class

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — In the American history classroom at the University of Missouri it was easy to spot the mother of Miss America. Not because she was older than the others, but — wow!

Mama is a knockout.

At 43, the mother of two children, Irene Bryant has a figure that could rival that of her daughter— Miss America of 1966. And those statistics read 36-23-36.

"When I was a freshman at Kansas University in 1939 my sorority asked me to compete in a contest but I didn't win," says Mrs. Bryant. "That was as close as I ever got to a beauty crown. And I've even forgotten what contest it was."

She didn't finish college and last summer, because of a divorce and grown children, she enrolled at the University of Missouri's Kansas City campus.

Mrs. Bryant is finishing work for a bachelor's degree in education. She is a senior and will continue after graduation next summer for a master's in speech pathology.

Miss America wants to be a pediatrician. Mama America wants to do speech therapy with children.

How goes it as a student?

"Let me put it this way," she says. "I'm much better than I was 26 years ago. In summer school I had an A in four hours and a B in another four. It's not quite as good as Debbie's. She had only one B-plus and the rest A's in her two years at Christian College.

"She has a keen mind. I wouldn't begin to take the courses she does."

A brother, Douglas is 21 and has been in the Army two years. He is stationed at Ft. Devens, Mass. Debbie's father, whom Mrs. Bryant divorced in June of 1964, is a civilian fire prevention engineer assigned to the 13th Air Force at Clark AFB in the Philippines.

Build Road For Children In Self Start Program

LOVELY, Ky. (AP) — For 32 Kentucky children, the path to school in West Virginia is across a narrow railroad bridge or by flatboat across the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River.

"Some of them have been caught on that bridge by trains," said Shayde Chapman, principal of the Nolan (W.Va.) elementary school which the children attend.

"They had to lie down and let the train pass over them, or get out to the edge of a pier, or, if they were lucky, run off the bridge ahead of the train," he said in an interview.

"Of course, it is just as dangerous crossing the river in boats when it is dark or when the water is up."

This condition has existed for years because there is no road large enough to permit Martin County, Ky., school buses to serve Lovely, a mountain hamlet on the West Virginia-Kentucky border.

But the problem may soon be solved — not by the state, or the county or the federal Appalachia program. Sympathetic citizens have raised funds from individuals and businesses and are giving their time to build an all-weather road.

They started with borrowed bulldozers and graders. During the last three weeks, the county has provided machinery under an agreement that the citizens pay the operator's salaries plus fuel costs.

"We took the Kentucky children because somebody had to care for them," Chapman said. "It is impossible for them to go to school in Kentucky, especially during wet or cold weather.

"Everything is just as legal as it can be made. Their parents either buy a small piece of property over here (West Virginia) and pay taxes on it, or they somehow qualify to vote in West Virginia.

"We provide books for the children and feed them. They are being taken care of."

Civilians Will Ease Burdens On Military

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new program set in motion by Secretary of Denfese Robert S. McNamara may lead eventually to wholesale shifts of civilians into noncombat jobs now handled by men in uniform.

The result would be a reduction of U.S. military manpower, now planned to reach close to 3 million, and a corresponding reduction in reliance on the draft to fill the ranks

A top level manpower utilization board will convene this fall to monitor the first phase of the new program and to develop plans for enlargement of it in subsequent years.

McNamara told a news conference Thursday that in its initial phase the program calls for hiring some 60,000 civilians during 1966 to perform administrative, clerical, supply and maintenance, medical, transportation and similar jobs now performed by military personnel.

"This will release some 75,000 officers and enlisted men who are now required for those duties," McNamara said.

He added: "This program will not only permit acceleration of our military buildup but it will also enable us to decrease the number of draftees who would otherwise be required."

He estimated that the drop of about 75,000 in inductions would span perhaps 18 months' time.

The draft recently was sharply turned upward, from about 17,000 men a month to a soon-to-be-achieved 35,000 a month, to help attain a 340,000-man increase in the regular forces because of the war in Viet Nam.

Fires Rage In Forests

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) Uncontrolled fires, pushed by fresh winds, crackled today through Northern California's tinder-dry forests, brush and grasslands.

The last rains fell six months ago.

Two fire fighters were burned, one seriously; separated blazes threatened two towns; a major interstate highway over the High Sierra was closed, and all fire-fighting units in the state were alerted. Blazes were eating at the outskirts of one of the towns and damage there was estimated at $500,000.

Flames ate into the outskirts of Vacaville between San Francisco and Sacramento. Middletown in Lake County, about 100 miles north of San Francisco, also was threatened.

Widening Of War Feared

NEW DELHI, India (AP) Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri said today India would defend its "territorial integrity" but did not want to give Communist China "any pretext" for aggression.

Shastri proposed a "joint investigation" of the disputed border between the two countries. He was replying in Parliament to an ultimatum from Red China giving India three days to pull out of a disputed Himalayan border area.

He said the investigation should take place as soon as possible to determine exactly where Indian border posts are. Red China claims they are on its territory.

The offer was similar to other Indian proposals for settling the border dispute which Red China has rejected in the past. China most recently turned down a suggestion that neutral observers check the borders.

In a blunt note today, the Red Chinese threatened India with "grave consequences" unless it withdraws within three days from a Tibet-Sikkim border area claimed by China.

The note did not specify what the consequences would be. But Red China struck at India in a border dispute in 1962 and the Indian army suffered a setback in the heavy fighting.

Red China's warning was interpreted in New Delhi as far more serious than the scores of notes and protests that have been hurled at India by Peking in recent months. This was the first such protest with a deadline.

Just a few hours after Red China broadcast its ultimatum, deeply worried Indian officials displayed a new reluctance to even speculate on whether the war against Pakistan could still be pursued with what Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri Thursday called "unabated vigor."

A State Department spokesman said in Washington the United States is maintaining a close watch on the India-Communist China border situation. He said the United States is very concerned over the possible extension of the India-Pakistan war.

Diplomats at United Nations headquarters in New York expressed belief that China would cross the border unless India backs down. One delegate explained that the Chinese, having announced a time limit, would lose face if they did not follow through on their ultimatum.

Little fighting was reported on the fronts Thursday.

Nab Two For Car Thefts

Ernest Harrington and Larry Hatley, both of Phoenix, Ariz., are charged with auto theft, according to Chief of Police Arthur Bruce.

Harrington was caught last night in an automobile owned by Mrs. Gennatta Blankenship, 2006 Kentucky, by Cairo police.

They saw the car at 2:35 a.m. this morning and gave chase. Harrington, they charge, tried to escape and wrecked the 1956 Chevrolet. Hatley jumped from the fleeing car. He is charged with stealing a 1962 Ford to come back to Sikeston.

The Ford was found this morning by police on Selma Street abandoned with the licence plate missing.

Sergeant Lawrence Woodward arrested Hatley at 313 Broadway. He had the car keys in his pocket, Woodward said.

Both men will be turned over to the Federal Bureai of Investigation.

Harrington is 19 and Hatley is 18.

Dickson kicked him, he said, and while Dickson was bending over a sofa, Montjoy struck him with a knife that entered his heart. Dickson died before a doctor could arrive.

Long Praises Farm Bill

Special to Daily Standard

WASHINGTON -- Passage of the new farm bill by congress will mean a step forward for Missouri Agriculture, Sen. Edward V. Long said today.

He said that he approves of some features of the bill, which passed the Senate, especially the dairy farming provisions.

He added that he objected to some features of its cotton provisions.

He objected to the part which will reduce the acreage of the state's cotton farmers by 25 to 30 per cent. This reduction would lower the income of cotton farmers in seven Southeast Missouri counties by $20 million, Senator Long said.

Senator Long said that he approves of retaining the wheat certificate plan, which he said "will increase our vital wheat exports".

Senator Long said that according to estimates 15 cents of every sales dollar farmers of Missouri earn comes from exported commodities. He added that if the House will accept the Senate bill "the picture looks good for Missouri's wheat exports, and this will be good for the wheat farmer's income".

Senate Passes Road Beauty Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The highway beautification bill strongly backed by Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson has cleared the Senate by an overwhelming 63-14 vote.

While the Senate remained in session Thursday night to pass the legislation, the House Public Roads subcommittee met at the same time and cleared a similar version.

The full House Public Works Committee scheduled a session on it today.

The bill passed by the Senate was a far cry from the one originally submitted by President Johnson.

But he told Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., chief sponsor of the legislation in the Senate, that the revised version was fully acceptable to him.

Mrs. Johnson said last week she would consider the bill "a step forward. . .even though we do not get all of the features we want."

The bill sent to the House by the Senate would ban billboards on much of the interstate and primary highway systems, require removal or screening of junkyards on the same routes, and provide $120 million a year in grants to the states for scenic enhancement and landscaping along all federal-aid roads.

Perhaps its most far-reaching provision is the requirement that signs be removed from the 225,000-mile primary system. This includes the nation's major routes, many of them four decades old.

Newspaper Blackout In New York

NEW YORK (AP) — New York faced today a blackout of all but one of its major daily newspapers. The AFL-CIO New York Newspaper Guild struck the New York Times and six other papers announced they would close in support.

Negotiations in the Times' strike, centered on Guild demands for job protection against automation and mergers, broke off early today after going almost nonstop for a day and a half. They were to resume at 11 a.m. The strike was called Thursday.

Mediator Theodore W. Kheel expressed hope during the recess that "with the benefit of some sleep and some reflection we'll be able to move to a final conclusion."

But Thomas J. Murphy, executive secretary of the New York Guild, said: "I hope he's right and I'm wrong. So far we have not resolved the major issues."

Kheel said the postponement of talks meant that the non-struck member papers of the Publishers Association of New York would not publish today

The afternoon New York Post, not a member of the association, said it would continue normal editions.

The Times announced Thursday night that it could not put out its Friday editions because other unions honored Guild picket lines. That led the Publishers Association to put into effect its announced plan to suspend publication in support of the Times position.

The papers affected, besides the Times, were the morning Daily News and Herald Tribune, and the afternoon Journal-American, World Telegram and Sun, Long Island Star-Journal and Long Island Press.

Two Jets Shot Down

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) --Two U. S. Air Force jet planes were shot down in North Viet Nam, a U. S. military spokesman said today.

The F105 Thunderchiefs, part of a six-plane raid Thursday, were apparently hit by intense antiaircraft and automatic weapons fire 80 miles northwest of Hanoi, the spokesman said.

The pilots were believed alive. They were listed as missing.

The downing of the two planes brought the total of U. S. planes shot down in North Viet Nam to 92 since air strikes began last February, the spokesman said.

A flight of fighter-bombers, believed to be American, destroyed the north end of a bridge in the demilitarized zone between North and South Viet Nam Thursday night, a U. S. military spokesman said.

Children, Others, Take Last Ride On Frisco

Today is the last day for passenger and mail service on the Frisco Railroad from St. Louis to Memphis.

This leaves Sikeston with no railroad passenger service on rail.

The train has left for St. Louis daily at 11:40 a.m. The train to Memphis left at 2:07 p.m.

Depot Agent D. R. Smith reports that there have been many people, including the Methodist and Murray Lane Kindergarten school pupils, who are taking last rides.

"If business was this good all the time we wouldn't think of discontinuing the service," he said. But, if accomodations had been kept up then probably people would still travel by way of rail."

"We average normally about three persons per day either getting off here in Sikeston or leaving Sikeston.

Mrs. Louis Hunter, 122 W. North, watched the last train come in. She watched the first one come in back in 1904.

White House Knows All News First In Society

WASHINGTON AP -- President Johnson's aides have passed the word to the administration's corps of public relations men: If there's something to be announced, let the White House know about it first.

The result, a check of Cabinet agencies showed today, is a steady flow of proposed or prepared news releases for appraisal at the White House.

"We want first refusal on anything that should appropriately come from here," one White House assistant said.

But at the same time, he said the White House probably will exercise more selectivity in choosing what will be returned to the executive agencies for release there.

The stream of agency news releases to and through the White House apparently picked up after an August conference which brought agency public affairs officers to the office of Bill D. Moyers, White House press secretary.

Johnson stopped in for what a White House assistant described as a pep talk.

At another point, people who were on hand reported, he lectured the public affairs men, demanding a better written flow of announcements about the administration.

He was quoted as saying if that did not come about, he would enlist some high school seniors from Johnson City, Tex., and count on them to do the job.

Officials in the Cabinet agencies and at the White House would not talk for attribution about the stepped-up flow of announcements.

A White House spokesman said the same kind of public relations operation has been conducted in past administrations.

But officials elsewhere in the administration said the effort has been stepped up

One agency's information man said Johnson has relayed word that he does not want to wake up in the morning and read in a newspaper an announcement or report he had not heard first at the White House.

Sunken Chlorine Barge Located Near LSU Campus

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) - A sunken barge containing 600 tons of lethal chlorine was located Thursday in the Mississippi River near the Louisiana State University campus.

Navy divers positively identified the sunken craft as the one which touched off a large-scale search when it was reported missing last Sunday in the aftermath of Hurricane Betsy.

Army Engineers, who said they were acting under orders from the White House, waited until 11:45 p.m. to announce the discovery.

Shipping in the busy Mississippi was immediately reopened.

"The barge is safe, and there is no danger of any kind," said Col. Thomas J. Bowen, Army district engineer.

Meanwhile, the clean-up from Betsy, which unleashed death and destruction on Louisiana a week ago, went on throughout the stricken areas. A few sections remained under water. Two more bodies were found in New Orleans, raising the known dead to 70 - plus 12 in other states.

More than 10,000 persons remain homeless in the New Orleans area.

Snow Storm Blows Itself Out In West

A late summer snowstorm, with winter's bitter elements of blowing and drifting snow, cold, ice and blustery winds, diminished across wide areas in the northern and central Rockies and adjacent Plains states today.

The U.S. Weather Bureau said that snow tapered off in most areas, except in some mountain sections, during the early morning. Strong winds continued in the storm belt and in most other western sections of the nation. But forecasters said the worst of the wintry weather appeared ended. Clear skies were reported in Montana for the first time in a week.

The Weather Bureau said the storm was one of the worst in history for September.

Snow piled up to 18 inches in the Whitefish, Mont., area near the Canadian border. The snow blanket measured 15 inches at Crawford, in western Nebraska.

At least five persons were killed in traffic accidents, three in Montana and two in Wyoming, on ice-covered highways.

Blowing snow caused four-foot drifts in central Montana. The Trail Ridge Highway, the world's highest continuous motor vehicle route in the Rocky Mountain National Park 80 miles northwest of Denver, was closed by drifting and ice glaze.

Duke Ellington Plays Concert In Cathedral

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A sellout crowd of 3,000 —paying up to $25 a seat — toe-tapped and applauded noisily as jazz pianist Duke Ellington played his form of church music in Grace Cathedral.

The Negro musician, saying "God has blessed" his career, played Thursday night for an audience which included the Rt. Rev. James A. Pike, Episcopal bishop of California, and members of San Francisco society.

"Duke Ellington has been endowed by God with the gift of genius," said the Very Rev. Julian Bartlett, dean of the Episcopal Cathedral on Nob Hill. "He and his company of artists make an offering to God of this concert."

Ellington, 66, played on a simple, temporary wooden platform behind the cathedral's impressive stone altar. He called the performance his "most important statement."

Ellington was backed by a group of 20, many of them jazz stars in their own right, such as Harry Carney, baritone saxaphone; Paul Gonsalves, tenor saxaphone, and Louie Bellson, drums. The group included vocalists and a dancer.

Most of the selections were Ellington's own compositions, including "New World a'Coming," the hit of the evening; "David Danced Before The Lord With All His Might," and "My People," his musical history of Negro people.

Mama America Easy To Spot In History Class

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — In the American history classroom at the University of Missouri it was easy to spot the mother of Miss America. Not because she was older than the others, but — wow!

Mama is a knockout.

At 43, the mother of two children, Irene Bryant has a figure that could rival that of her daughter— Miss America of 1966. And those statistics read 36-23-36.

"When I was a freshman at Kansas University in 1939 my sorority asked me to compete in a contest but I didn't win," says Mrs. Bryant. "That was as close as I ever got to a beauty crown. And I've even forgotten what contest it was."

She didn't finish college and last summer, because of a divorce and grown children, she enrolled at the University of Missouri's Kansas City campus.

Mrs. Bryant is finishing work for a bachelor's degree in education. She is a senior and will continue after graduation next summer for a master's in speech pathology.

Miss America wants to be a pediatrician. Mama America wants to do speech therapy with children.

How goes it as a student?

"Let me put it this way," she says. "I'm much better than I was 26 years ago. In summer school I had an A in four hours and a B in another four. It's not quite as good as Debbie's. She had only one B-plus and the rest A's in her two years at Christian College.

"She has a keen mind. I wouldn't begin to take the courses she does."

A brother, Douglas is 21 and has been in the Army two years. He is stationed at Ft. Devens, Mass. Debbie's father, whom Mrs. Bryant divorced in June of 1964, is a civilian fire prevention engineer assigned to the 13th Air Force at Clark AFB in the Philippines.

Build Road For Children In Self Start Program

LOVELY, Ky. (AP) — For 32 Kentucky children, the path to school in West Virginia is across a narrow railroad bridge or by flatboat across the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River.

"Some of them have been caught on that bridge by trains," said Shayde Chapman, principal of the Nolan (W.Va.) elementary school which the children attend.

"They had to lie down and let the train pass over them, or get out to the edge of a pier, or, if they were lucky, run off the bridge ahead of the train," he said in an interview.

"Of course, it is just as dangerous crossing the river in boats when it is dark or when the water is up."

This condition has existed for years because there is no road large enough to permit Martin County, Ky., school buses to serve Lovely, a mountain hamlet on the West Virginia-Kentucky border.

But the problem may soon be solved — not by the state, or the county or the federal Appalachia program. Sympathetic citizens have raised funds from individuals and businesses and are giving their time to build an all-weather road.

They started with borrowed bulldozers and graders. During the last three weeks, the county has provided machinery under an agreement that the citizens pay the operator's salaries plus fuel costs.

"We took the Kentucky children because somebody had to care for them," Chapman said. "It is impossible for them to go to school in Kentucky, especially during wet or cold weather.

"Everything is just as legal as it can be made. Their parents either buy a small piece of property over here (West Virginia) and pay taxes on it, or they somehow qualify to vote in West Virginia.

"We provide books for the children and feed them. They are being taken care of."

Civilians Will Ease Burdens On Military

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new program set in motion by Secretary of Denfese Robert S. McNamara may lead eventually to wholesale shifts of civilians into noncombat jobs now handled by men in uniform.

The result would be a reduction of U.S. military manpower, now planned to reach close to 3 million, and a corresponding reduction in reliance on the draft to fill the ranks

A top level manpower utilization board will convene this fall to monitor the first phase of the new program and to develop plans for enlargement of it in subsequent years.

McNamara told a news conference Thursday that in its initial phase the program calls for hiring some 60,000 civilians during 1966 to perform administrative, clerical, supply and maintenance, medical, transportation and similar jobs now performed by military personnel.

"This will release some 75,000 officers and enlisted men who are now required for those duties," McNamara said.

He added: "This program will not only permit acceleration of our military buildup but it will also enable us to decrease the number of draftees who would otherwise be required."

He estimated that the drop of about 75,000 in inductions would span perhaps 18 months' time.

The draft recently was sharply turned upward, from about 17,000 men a month to a soon-to-be-achieved 35,000 a month, to help attain a 340,000-man increase in the regular forces because of the war in Viet Nam.

Fires Rage In Forests

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) Uncontrolled fires, pushed by fresh winds, crackled today through Northern California's tinder-dry forests, brush and grasslands.

The last rains fell six months ago.

Two fire fighters were burned, one seriously; separated blazes threatened two towns; a major interstate highway over the High Sierra was closed, and all fire-fighting units in the state were alerted. Blazes were eating at the outskirts of one of the towns and damage there was estimated at $500,000.

Flames ate into the outskirts of Vacaville between San Francisco and Sacramento. Middletown in Lake County, about 100 miles north of San Francisco, also was threatened.

Widening Of War Feared

NEW DELHI, India (AP) Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri said today India would defend its "territorial integrity" but did not want to give Communist China "any pretext" for aggression.

Shastri proposed a "joint investigation" of the disputed border between the two countries. He was replying in Parliament to an ultimatum from Red China giving India three days to pull out of a disputed Himalayan border area.

He said the investigation should take place as soon as possible to determine exactly where Indian border posts are. Red China claims they are on its territory.

The offer was similar to other Indian proposals for settling the border dispute which Red China has rejected in the past. China most recently turned down a suggestion that neutral observers check the borders.

In a blunt note today, the Red Chinese threatened India with "grave consequences" unless it withdraws within three days from a Tibet-Sikkim border area claimed by China.

The note did not specify what the consequences would be. But Red China struck at India in a border dispute in 1962 and the Indian army suffered a setback in the heavy fighting.

Red China's warning was interpreted in New Delhi as far more serious than the scores of notes and protests that have been hurled at India by Peking in recent months. This was the first such protest with a deadline.

Just a few hours after Red China broadcast its ultimatum, deeply worried Indian officials displayed a new reluctance to even speculate on whether the war against Pakistan could still be pursued with what Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri Thursday called "unabated vigor."

A State Department spokesman said in Washington the United States is maintaining a close watch on the India-Communist China border situation. He said the United States is very concerned over the possible extension of the India-Pakistan war.

Diplomats at United Nations headquarters in New York expressed belief that China would cross the border unless India backs down. One delegate explained that the Chinese, having announced a time limit, would lose face if they did not follow through on their ultimatum.

Little fighting was reported on the fronts Thursday.

Nab Two For Car Thefts

Ernest Harrington and Larry Hatley, both of Phoenix, Ariz., are charged with auto theft, according to Chief of Police Arthur Bruce.

Harrington was caught last night in an automobile owned by Mrs. Gennatta Blankenship, 2006 Kentucky, by Cairo police.

They saw the car at 2:35 a.m. this morning and gave chase. Harrington, they charge, tried to escape and wrecked the 1956 Chevrolet. Hatley jumped from the fleeing car. He is charged with stealing a 1962 Ford to come back to Sikeston.

The Ford was found this morning by police on Selma Street abandoned with the licence plate missing.

Sergeant Lawrence Woodward arrested Hatley at 313 Broadway. He had the car keys in his pocket, Woodward said.

Both men will be turned over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Harrington is 19 and Hatley is 18.

Knifing Fatal For Dickson

CHARLESTON -- The death of Frank Dickson, 35, Negro, who was stabbled last Friday by L. V. Montjoy, was held by a coroner's jury to be justifiable homicide, at a hearing Tuesday.

Montjoy is married to a sister of Dickson, and is a small crippled man. He testified that Dickson sent the Montjoy's son to get his father and mother Friday morning, and tried to force Montjoy to take him to Cairo. Dickson kicked him, he said, and while Dickson was bending over a sofa, Montjoy struck him with a knife that entered his heart. Dickson died before a doctor could arrive.

The jury heard testimony from Montjoy's son. The jury was composed of Luther Cherry, Stennis Clemons, A. J. Harris, Frank Stone, Virgil Hathhorn and Charlie Jones.

Services were held today at the Sparks Funeral home.

Long Praises Farm Bill

Special to Daily Standard

WASHINGTON -- Passage of the new farm bill by congress will mean a step forward for Missouri Agriculture, Sen. Edward V. Long said today.

He said that he approves of some features of the bill, which passed the Senate, especially the dairy farming provisions.

He added that he objected to some features of its cotton provisions.

He objected to the part which will reduce the acreage of the state's cotton farmers by 25 to 30 per cent. This reduction would lower the income of cotton farmers in seven Southeast Missouri counties by $20 million, Senator Long said.

Senator Long said that he approves of retaining the wheat certificate plan, which he said "will increase our vital wheat exports".

Senator Long said that according to estimates 15 cents of every sales dollar farmers of Missouri earn comes from exported commodities. He added that if the House will accept the Senate bill "the picture looks good for Missouri's wheat exports, and this will be good for the wheat farmer's income".

Senate Passes Road Beauty Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The highway beautification bill strongly backed by Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson has cleared the Senate by an overwhelming 63-14 vote.

While the Senate remained in session Thursday night to pass the legislation, the House Public Roads subcommittee met at the same time and cleared a similar version.

The full House Public Works Committee scheduled a session on it today.

The bill passed by the Senate was a far cry from the one originally submitted by President Johnson.

But he told Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., chief sponsor of the legislation in the Senate, that the revised version was fully acceptable to him.

Mrs. Johnson said last week she would consider the bill "a step forward. . .even though we do not get all of the features we want."

The bill sent to the House by the Senate would ban billboards on much of the interstate and primary highway systems, require removal or screening of junkyards on the same routes, and provide $120 million a year in grants to the states for scenic enhancement and landscaping along all federal-aid roads.

Perhaps its most far-reaching provision is the requirement that signs be removed from the 225,000-mile primary system. This includes the nation's major routes, many of them four decades old.

Newspaper Blackout In New York

NEW YORK (AP) — New York faced today a blackout of all but one of its major daily newspapers. The AFL-CIO New York Newspaper Guild struck the New York Times and six other papers announced they would close in support.

Negotiations in the Times' strike, centered on Guild demands for job protection against automation and mergers, broke off early today after going almost nonstop for a day and a half. They were to resume at 11 a.m. The strike was called Thursday.

Mediator Theodore W. Kheel expressed hope during the recess that "with the benefit of some sleep and some reflection we'll be able to move to a final conclusion."

But Thomas J. Murphy, executive secretary of the New York Guild, said: "I hope he's right and I'm wrong. So far we have not resolved the major issues."

Kheel said the postponement of talks meant that the non-struck member papers of the Publishers Association of New York would not publish today

The afternoon New York Post, not a member of the association, said it would continue normal editions.

The Times announced Thursday night that it could not put out its Friday editions because other unions honored Guild picket lines. That led the Publishers Association to put into effect its announced plan to suspend publication in support of the Times position.

The papers affected, besides the Times, were the morning Daily News and Herald Tribune, and the afternoon Journal-American, World Telegram and Sun, Long Island Star-Journal and Long Island Press.

Two Jets Shot Down

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) --Two U. S. Air Force jet planes were shot down in North Viet Nam, a U. S. military spokesman said today.

The F105 Thunderchiefs, part of a six-plane raid Thursday, were apparently hit by intense antiaircraft and automatic weapons fire 80 miles northwest of Hanoi, the spokesman said.

The pilots were believed alive. They were listed as missing.

The downing of the two planes brought the total of U. S. planes shot down in North Viet Nam to 92 since air strikes began last February, the spokesman said.

A flight of fighter-bombers, believed to be American, destroyed the north end of a bridge in the demilitarized zone between North and South Viet Nam Thursday night, a U. S. military spokesman said.

Children, Others, Take Last Ride On Frisco

Today is the last day for passenger and mail service on the Frisco Railroad from St. Louis to Memphis.

This leaves Sikeston with no railroad passenger service on rail.

The train has left for St. Louis daily at 11:40 a.m. The train to Memphis left at 2:07 p.m.

Depot Agent D. R. Smith reports that there have been many people, including the Methodist and Murray Lane Kindergarten school pupils, who are taking last rides.

"If business was this good all the time we wouldn't think of discontinuing the service," he said. But, if accomodations had been kept up then probably people would still travel by way of rail."

"We average normally about three persons per day either getting off here in Sikeston or leaving Sikeston.

Mrs. Louis Hunter, 122 W. North, watched the last train come in. She watched the first one come in back in 1904.

White House Knows All News First In Society

WASHINGTON AP -- President Johnson's aides have passed the word to the administration's corps of public relations men: If there's something to be announced, let the White House know about it first.

The result, a check of Cabinet agencies showed today, is a steady flow of proposed or prepared news releases for appraisal at the White House.

"We want first refusal on anything that should appropriately come from here," one White House assistant said.

But at the same time, he said the White House probably will exercise more selectivity in choosing what will be returned to the executive agencies for release there.

The stream of agency news releases to and through the White House apparently picked up after an August conference which brought agency public affairs officers to the office of Bill D. Moyers, White House press secretary.

Johnson stopped in for what a White House assistant described as a pep talk.

At another point, people who were on hand reported, he lectured the public affairs men, demanding a better written flow of announcements about the administration.

He was quoted as saying if that did not come about, he would enlist some high school seniors from Johnson City, Tex., and count on them to do the job.

Officials in the Cabinet agencies and at the White House would not talk for attribution about the stepped-up flow of announcements.

A White House spokesman said the same kind of public relations operation has been conducted in past administrations.

But officials elsewhere in the administration said the effort has been stepped up

One agency's information man said Johnson has relayed word that he does not want to wake up in the morning and read in a newspaper an announcement or report he had not heard first at the White House.

THE PEOPLE, 1787-1964

One-hundred and seventy-eight years ago today the Constitution of the United States was signed. From its birth in agony it has led a life of struggle and pain. But the Constitution has survived.

The independence of the original American colonies did not bring security. Economic and international problems were enormous. Governments of the individual states were threatened with insurrections.

But this country, like no other venturing out on the journey into nationhood, had great and wise men to lead it. They were men of fine education, men of means, men of vision and faith, and most of all men of almost limitless political skill.

Yet being wise men, with the wit to acknowledge human frailty, they saw the need for a government that could embrace persons of all the levels in society without, in the process, leveling them all. They constructed, therefore, a nation of law, not of men. They avoided the excesses of democracy by forming a republic. They carefully separated the powers of government into three divisions, legislative, executive and judicial, and so limited the powers of each that it could not usurp the powers of the others.

Those men who signed the document on Sept. 17, 1787, were not satisfied with it. Each of them had compromised his beliefs in some way. In secret session at the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia, they had argued and debated for three and a half months before reaching tenuous agreement.

Mere hours before the ceremony of signing, words and phrases were being rewritten.

But when all was said and done, the delegates signed. In a message addressed to GEORGE WASHINGTON, president of the convention, Dr. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN spoke what must have represented the feeling of most of the delegates.

"I confess," said FRANKLIN, "there are several parts of this Constitution which I do not at present approve, but I am not sure I shall never approve them? For having lived long I have experienced many instances of being obliged by better information or fuller consideration, to change opinions even on importnat subjects, which I once thought right but found to be otherwise. . .In these sentiments, Sir, I agree to this Constitution with all its faults, if they are such; because I think a general Government necessary for us, and there is no form of Government but what may be a blessing to the people if well administered. . .I doubt too whether any other convention we can obtain will be able to make a better Constitution."

In the autumn of that year 1787 General WASHINGTON wrote a letter to a friend in which he said: "The Constitution that is submitted (to the states for ratification) is not free from imperfections--but there are as few radical defects in it as could well be expected, considering the heterogeneous mass of which the convention was composed, and the diversity of interests that are to be attended to. As a constitutional door is opened for future amendments and alterations, I think it would be wise in the People to accept what is offered to them."

So it was written, "We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union. . . "

Union was necessary. The Articles of Confederation had been too weak, too imperfect, to accomplish a national purpose. The 13 states were jealous of one another. The common men threatened to overthrow the men of estate who constituted the various state governments. These leaders, state loyalists all, drew together and built a rock on which to stand in strength.

By their signing of this Constitution 178 years ago a revolution was changed into a Federal Government. And because Federal power was feared by the very men who ordained it, they wrote into the Constitution the safeguards, the checks and balances, which have permitted it to survive years of attack, corrosion and erosion, a civil war, and human deceit.

This Consitution, a covenant among the various states, is the base on which stands the most powerful nation in the world today. True, its battles are not done. The struggle to centralize power and make men supreme over law goes on. But the nation resists. The people fight back --because they have something to fight for.

The mighty pursuit of "a more perfect union" has become a battle to preserve the original meaning and purpose of the Consitution, for its enemies are many and they reside in high places.

Like WASHINGTON, FRANKLIN, HAMILTON, MASON, RANDOLPH, MORRIS, PINCKNEY, PATERSON, GERRY, DICKINSON and the other delegates who framed the Constitution, Americans today cry out loud and clear against the excesses which would destroy what made a nation.

In an urgent voice, the people insist on a Federal Government that rejects tyranny, and separates power. And this must be, to safeguard justice and tranquility, to provide common defense, to promote general welfare, and to "secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

The reason that the United Stares is sending troops to Viet Nam is because this country's leaders do not want to see the Communists take over Southeast Asia.

This is a worthy purpose. We support the war effort there because it is necessary in the national interest.

But winning the war is something else again. It is impossible. The best hope is for a stalemate--a settlement in which the Communists can be kept from controlling South Viet Nam. In this way their encroachment can be restricted as it was in Korea. It may be necessary for the United States to keep troops in Viet Nam for many years after the fighting ends.

A report by Quakers points up why the war can't be won.

A three-member Quaker investigating team just back from Southeast Asia concluded that "90 per cent of the Vietnamese people feel that they have no real stake in this war" and that a military victory "will turn to ashes" if the United States continues its present course.

It is very difficult to help a people who don't want to be helped.

If the United States is in the war to save South Viet Nam it is because this country wants to save it and not because the Vietnamese have the desire. They couldn't care less.

It still is necessary to prevent the Communist takeover in South Viet Nam from OUR standpoint. That's why this country is fighting there and it is the only reason.

It is going to be difficult to continue to protect these indifferent people after the war is over. But even if they dislike it or are indifferent to our continued presence, this country's intervention makes sense.

It is we who cares who holds South Viet Nam.

Quakers are trying to end the war and bring it to the bargaining table. There is no indication that they are having any better luck than President Lyndon B. Johnson or Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

The board of the American Friends Service Committee met in Philadelphia last week to receive the report of its investigating team and to consider ways to bring the war closer to the bargaining table.

The Missouri Highway Patrol will start a recruiting, testing and training program for 145 new troopers in October. The increase in personnel, which was provided by the last session of the Legislature, will require four training classes, the last of which will be in October, 1966.

Colonel Hugh H. Waggoner, Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, says that he is looking for young men who are interested in making a career of law enforcement who can meet the requirements.

The Patrol law, which sets out that new members are to be selected on a bipartisan basis and that applicants shall not be discriminated against because of race, creed and color, has created some problems for Colonel Waggoner.

He said, "I am becoming disturbed because we are not receiving applications from young men who are Republicans. We must select half of the recruits for training from each of the two major parties. The lack of interest by young Republicans is causing us some recruitment problems. The law is specific on this point, and unless we find applicants of equal number from both parties our training program may be drastically delayed."

Colonel Waggoner pointed out, too, that while the Patrol was receiving some applications from young colored men, he was experiencing difficulty in getting applications from those who meet the basic requirements and who can successfully complete the tests and training.

The basic requirements for selection to take the Patrol tests are: The applicant must be 21 and not have reached his 33rd birthday, a tax paying resident for three years, a high school graduate, at least 5 feet and 10 inches tall with no tattoos, in good health and having never been convicted of a crime. Those meeting the requirements are given rigid physical and mental tests.

Those from the two political parties making the highest grades are then investigated before being accepted for an eight-week police training course at the Patrol Academy in Rolla. Having successfully completed the training, they are commissioned as probationary patrolmen.

Applications are available at each of the nine Highway Patrol troop headquarters. They are located at Lee's Summit, Macon, Kirkwood, Springfield, Poplar Bluff, Jefferson City, Willow Springs, St. Joseph and Rolla.

Businessmen along the nation's main street seem to be as suspicious of government offering subsidies as their predecessors, in the market place of ancient Rome, were reputed to be on the matter of Greeks bearing gifts.

In a just completed poll of the nation's independent business proprietors, the respondents voted a wary attitude on a bill now before Congress, known as H. R. 271, introduced by Rep. Charles Bennett of Florida, which would allow businesses a tax deduction for providing additional jobs paying $3,000 a year more, and to all who provide new jobs for the unskilled with a tax deduction amounting to 25% of the annual salary paid the additional employees. The vote for the measure was 48%, opposed 46% with 6% undecided.

The Federation records show that over the more than twenty-two years, in which over a thousand issues have been presented to the independent business proprietors, there has not previously been such an inconclusive division of opinion on an issue. Under the rules of the organization, lacking a majority vote, no position can be taken on an issue.

Contrasted to this result, is the one more recently taken on the proposal by Rep. Charles Chamberlain of Michigan, which would permit a business to plow-back into the operation tax-free, up to 20% of a year's profit or a maximum of $30,-000, in a year. This measure has the approval of 82% of the nation's independent business proprietors.

The six month's report for the continuous field survey now being conducted by the Federation on employment shows that over 30% of the independent businessmen of the nation have expanded in the last year to furnish almost four million new jobs. "It seems quite obvious, that if given the opportunity to put back some profits in business, independent operators will further expand and hire more people. It is heartening to note that Rep. Bennett recognizes the employment potential capacity of the independent business, but apparently his proposal raises fears of too much additional government interference in the operation of business, whereas the Chamberlain measure would accomplish the same or greater result without encountering the danger of greater political supervision of business.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Strong Left - Wing Union Charges U.S. Seeks Colonialism through Guns.

New York: -- The gracious gentleman from Vermont, slightly bemused, strode swiftly from the speakers' platform of a union convention hall here so he could get back to the White House for the bemedaling of astronauts Conrad and Cooper.

The white - haired gentleman, Sen. George Aiken, had, in the jargon of the entertainment world's Variety, laid an egg. He did so the other day because he had not done his homework.

He went before an audience of 300 delegates to the 30th convention of the United Electrical Workers[(UE) union and had averred that the U.S. would meet the challenge of world pressures -- including those in Viet Nam. So strong was the silence, one could have heard a dialectic drop. And them he added:

". . . His (President Johnson's) appointment of Arthur Goldberg, trained in the school of labor diplomacy, should yield rich fruit in the field of international diplomacy."

The Sphinx has been garrulous compared to the delegates' stony reaction. Obviously the speech of the Senator, ranking member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, the Aeronautical and Space Sciences Committee and the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, was not quite reaching the audience.

It is regrettable no one told the gentle Senator that Arthur Goldberg, then a labor lawyer, had led the fight to oust this very union from the labor movement back in 1949. Counselor Goldberg's argument then asserted that the UE and many of its leaders had echoed the Soviet's cold war line and had no place inside labor.

On the surface there appears to be good reason for the Senator's willingness to address this union's convention. It, after all, does have thousands of members in such vital complexes as General Electric, Westinghouse, McGraw - Edison and Sylvania.

Had the soft-spoken 73-year-old New England Republican researched the union's contemporary literature, he would have learned that it obviously did not believe the U.S. would meet "the challenge." Nor did some of its left-wing officials care much for America's efforts to meet that challenge.

At least a few phrases from that literature should be put on the record since the UE now is recovering from its old misfortunes and is about to launch wide organizing drives in many industrial centers.

The officers, for example, deem the following excerpts from its convention reports "properly critical" of the U.S.:

"In Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic the issue is crystal clear. Shall the people have the right to determine their own future, and government chosen by them, or have their future and government determined for them by the U.S. If the latter is the continued policy of the U.S. government, then the direction is inevitably towards nuclear war, as no people can, or will, accept a new colonial status which such policy makes implicit.

"The policy of the U.S., as applied in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic, is in the direction of destroying the possibility of peace based on the co-existence of states with different social systems. It is a policy of insisting on the right of the U.S. to impose a system on peoples by military force."

Then came an attack on George Meany and the other labor men who are backing U.S. policy on the Caribbean and China Sea fronts. The "Meany-type leadership" is assailed in the literature, which was on the delegates' tables during the Senator's speech. It is accused of having "effectively muted the voice of the working people, making them virtually ineffective in the most important of all struggles. . . "

The UE leaders assert they regard their struggle for their foreign policy as their "most important and sacred obligation."

This then is the nature of the UE which has just won jurisdiction over 1,100 employes at the Waynesboro, Va., General Electric plant. This then is the UE whose most forceful leader, James Matles, general secretary - treasurer, rarely has deviated from the Soviet line according to quantitative testimony before such Congressional committees as the House Labor and Education group.

Politics doesn't necessarily make strangers bedfellows. But it is a tricky business. Audiences always should be researched.

LONDON (AP) — If your last name is Belcher it doesn't mean you had an ancestor renowned for burping. It comes from a word meaning someone pretty—bel-chere.

If your name is Allbones, be proud of it. It derives from Alban, the first British martyr. And if your name is Onion, don't despair. It's from the good and ancient Welsh personal name, Enion.

Shacklady—and there are lots of them in England—comes not from some onetime refined lady reduced to living in a hovel. Shacklady is a variation of Shakerley, a hamlet in Lancashire.

James Pennethorne Hughes discusses these names -- and hundreds more—in his just published book: "Is Thy Name Wart? The Origins of Some Curious and Other Surnames."

"Some surnames which appear ordinary are in fact curious," says the author. "Others which appear grotesque are, when allowances have been made for medieval spelling, almost universal illiteracy, the error of copyists, and the vagaries of English dialect, straightforward enough."

With hints and a number of source book suggestions, Hughes has written a 128-page book full of fascinating facts about surnames, many of them found in the United States.

The Normans apparently introduced last names to this country. The recording, by parishes, of all births, marriages and deaths was required. This was unpopular and many refused to comply.

The surname business was so haphazard, that until 1910, in Yorkshire, the Rev. Sabine Baring-Gould found many men born with a name in one spelling, who were married under another, and buried under a third.

Bridges, Briggs and Burgess, Hughes says, can all be from some ancient emigrant from Bruges who settled in England. Cullen can be from Cologne. Pickard and Packard came from Picardy across the English Channel.

Calvert may not be as elegant as it sounds. The author finds it comes from the occupation of calf-herding, a man who looked after a pack of calves.

Lush and Lusher are not from hitting the bottle, but from the honorable office of Usher. Horn, he says, is a name of great antiquity, coming from a parish in Kent.

COMMUNIST POLAND: TEST CASE FOR FOREIGN AID

It was quite a long time ago that the State Department in Washington decided suddenly that we liked Poland's communist Premier Gomulka and that surely we could persuade him to like us. In fact, it was more than eight years ago that our large-scale foreign aid to communist Poland got underway. It has been going on ever since.

Gomulka and the Communist Party of Poland are happy to get our money. There can be no doubt it comes in handy in helping to shore up the rickety system by which they enslave a nation of millions with a proud history of loving liberty. For a while, before they were sure of us, Poland's leaders felt they had to make a few noises that would sound like a kind of "independence" from Moscow. Now they no longer bother even to make the noises.

For many years, American tax money has been flowing into communist-ruled Poland to help build, among other things, an $11 million hospital in the Polish city of Krakow, where the socialized medical division of the all-embracing Polish state could luxuriate in new and sumptuous quarters. This year the building of the hospital was complete, and our Vice President and 40 members of Congress asked Poland's communist bosses please to let them come and attend the ceremony dedicating the hospital to the communist state.

Gomulka and his henchmen turned them down. Secretary of State Dean Rusk is reported as saying: "I am awfully worried about Poland. It has been uncooperative and I am very disappointed with its leaders."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Food and Drug inspectors are conducting a quiet but urgent nationwide search for contaminated or mislabeled parenteral drugs, the life-saving solutions used for intravenous feeding.

At least one hospital in Coral Gables, Fla., has complained that bad drugs may have been to blame for the loss of several patients who should have survived their operations.

The parenteral drug scare was touched off by trouble with one of the largest producers, Abbott Laboratories of North Chicago, which has been compelled repeatedly to recall dangerous drugs from hospitals and doctors' offices.

This column has also discovered that the Food and Drug Administration's compliance chief, Allan Rayfield, phoned the Chicago office one morning and ordered its inspectors to end the Abbott investigation by noon.

Rayfield normally receives his instructions from Deputy Commissioner John Harvey, whose brother, I. D. Harvey, is a regional sales manager for Abbott.

Rayfield explained to this column that he has charge of all Food and Drug investigations.

"It was my judgment at the time," he said, "that the Abbott inspection could be completed by a certain time."

He added that he had spoken about Abbott only once to the deputy commissioner, who immediately declared he had a brother working for the company.

"That was the last time I discussed Abbott with him," said Rayfield.

AGENTS CHANGE SIDES

This column has also learned that two Food and Drug inspectors, Cornelius Flynn and William Truskowski, were offered higher salaries by Abbott in the middle of the investigation. Both went to work for the company they had been investigating.

John Guill, director of the agency's Chicago office, pointed out that the government had no power to prevent the pair from going to work for anyone they pleased. He said they had contributed "nothing of regulatory significance" to the Abbott case.

He acknowledged, however, that Truskowski had completed an assignment at the Abbott plant even after he had made known his intention to join the company. He had gone to the plant, Guill said, merely to pick up some samples.

The first crackdown on Abbott came a year ago after the discovery that 45 batches of injectables had the wrong labels or bottle caps. Since many doctors identify a solution by its cap, the mixup could have had serious consequences.

Food and Drug inspectors concluded, according to an internal document that "all parenteral drugs produced by the firm by the same methods and using the same facilities and controls are adulterated within the meaning of (the law)."

$800,000 MIXUP

Summoned to Washington for a conference, Abbott's representatives admitted, according to the confidential minutes, "except where a hospital might notify a doctor of a label mixup, doctors were not being told of this label mixup."

Food and Drug officials demanded that doctors be notified at once and that "a warning letter would not be soon enough or adequate."

The company agreed to send out telegrams and reportedly spent $800,000 to recall the mislabeled bottles.

The government followed up with a show-cause order, then a formal hearing which the company requested be held in Washington. The transcript was forwarded to the Chicago office, however, for a decision.

Guill told this column that he decided not to prosecute because Abbott was "a highly responsible firm."

"It was Abbott," he said, "that called the mixup to our attention in the first place. This firm has been meticulous about notifying us of any trouble, and has pulled its questionable goods off the market without quibbling. With their tremendous production, some trouble is almost inevitable."

TROUBLE IN THE LAB

After prosecution was dropped, however, the company was obliged to issue four more recalls. As late as August 24, Food and Drug asked the U.S. attorney in Denver to seize several cases of Abbott products.

"Examination shows that the article is non-sterile," the request stated.

A company spokesman refused to discuss any aspect of this story, except to say that Deputy Commissioner Harvey's brother had been with the firm for 35 years.

Meanwhile, the Abbott case has led Food and Drug inspectors across the country to check on all brands of parenteral drugs, since these dextrose, saline and other miracle solutions are essential for saving lives.

"We have found things that shouldn't be in the bottles," a Food and Drug spokesman acknowledged to this column. "But this country still has the best drugs in the world."

Note: Inspectors are satisfied that a Los Angeles boy who was injected with deadly alochol out of an Abbott bottle supposedly containing a parenteral preparation was the victim of sabotage. They believe a disgruntled hospital employee deliberately filled the bottle with alcohol.

Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson are continuing to score newsbeats in the Washington Merry-Go-Round. Here is an addition to their remarkable, continuing record:

Pope's Visit -- Pearson, reporting Aug. 6, 1964, on his audience with the Pope, quoted his Holiness as saying of a possible trip to the United States, "With God's help I hope someday to come." The Pope arrives Oct. 4.

Pakistan - India War -- Six years ago, in Dec., 1959, when Pearson visited Pakistan and India, he warned of the danger of the arms buildup in that area and cited the tremendous amount of arms the U. S. was pouring into Pakistan as likely to cause war.

In subsequent columns, Pearson repeated this warning. He also called attention to the military dictatorship of Pakistan and the difficulty the U. S. would have in controlling it.

Russian What -- On Aug. 23, 1965, Pearson reported that Sen. George McGovern, D-N. D., was considering a drive to force George Meany and the administration not to carry wheat to Russia in non-foreign bottoms or he would withhold his support of repeal of Section 14-B of the Taft-Hartley Act and the right-to-work laws. This was front page news in all the papers.

Peace Negotiations Re Viet Nam -- On Aug. 14, 1965, Pearson published a partial text of a secret memo which the United States has sent to Great Britain, France, and other friendly governments outlining our offers to North Viet Nam to secure peace negotiations. Twelve days later, the British, publishing a white paper, printed the text of this memo.

JFK and Dean Rusk -- The sensation in diplomatic circles has been Arthur Schlesinger's revelation, in his book published in August, that the late President Kennedy was planning to ease out Dean Rusk. During the Cuban missile showdown in Oct., 1962, the Washington Merry-Go-Round published an immediate release stating there was friction between Rusk and the President and that Rusk resented the President's going over his head to confer with McGeorge Bundy.

Pearson's story was officially denied by Rusk but now is partially substantiated by the Schlesinger book.

Water Shortage -- Pearson has published a series of columns on the New York water shortage in which he was well ahead of most other correspondents. He was the first to charge wanton leaks in the city of New York and the failure of New York to install water meters.

Later, Secretary Udall made this charge publicly and Mayor Wagner has now declared a limited policy of installing individual meters and has hired a battery of experts to plug up leaks.

Abe Fortas to the Supreme Court -- In an immediate release story, Pearson told how Abe Fortas had declined the President's offer to go on the Supreme Court. Four days later, July 24, 1965, President Johnson, after appointing Fortas, explained that Fortas had turned down the job but that he had persuaded him to change his mind.

Bay of Pigs Opposition -- Immediately after the Bay of Pigs fiasco, on May 9, 1961, Pearson told how Chester Bowles, then Under Secretary of State, had opposed the President's Bay of Pigs policy. Last month, Arthur Schlesinger substantiated this in his book and gave further details.

This is part of the recent box score of the Washington Merry-Go-Round.

THE PEOPLE, 1787-1964

One-hundred and seventy-eight years ago today the Constitution of the United States was signed. From its birth in agony it has led a life of struggle and pain. But the Constitution has survived.

The independence of the original American colonies did not bring security. Economic and international problems were enormous. Governments of the individual states were threatened with insurrections.

But this country, like no other venturing out on the journey into nationhood, had great and wise men to lead it. They were men of fine education, men of means, men of vision and faith, and most of all men of almost limitless political skill.

Yet being wise men, with the wit to acknowledge human frailty, they saw the need for a government that could embrace persons of all the levels in society without, in the process, leveling them all. They constructed, therefore, a nation of law, not of men. They avoided the excesses of democracy by forming a republic. They carefully separated the powers of government into three divisions, legislative, executive and judicial, and so limited the powers of each that it could not usurp the powers of the others.

Those men who signed the document on Sept. 17, 1787, were not satisfied with it. Each of them had compromised his beliefs in some way. In secret session at the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia, they had argued and debated for three and a half months before reaching tenuous agreement.

Mere hours before the ceremony of signing, words and phrases were being rewritten.

But when all was said and done, the delegates signed. In a message addressed to GEORGE WASHINGTON, president of the convention, Dr. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN spoke what must have represented the feeling of most of the delegates.

"I confess," said FRANKLIN, "there are several parts of this Constitution which I do not at present approve, but I am not sure I shall never approve them? For having lived long I have experienced many instances of being obliged by better information or fuller consideration, to change opinions even on importnat subjects, which I once thought right but found to be otherwise. . .In these sentiments, Sir, I agree to this Constitution with all its faults, if they are such; because I think a general Government necessary for us, and there is no form of Government but what may be a blessing to the people if well administered. . .I doubt too whether any other convention we can obtain will be able to make a better Constitution."

In the autumn of that year 1787 General WASHINGTON wrote a letter to a friend in which he said: "The Constitution that is submitted (to the states for ratification) is not free from imperfections--but there are as few radical defects in it as could well be expected, considering the heterogeneous mass of which the convention was composed, and the diversity of interests that are to be attended to. As a constitutional door is opened for future amendments and alterations, I think it would be wise in the People to accept what is offered to them."

So it was written, "We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union. . . "

Union was necessary. The Articles of Confederation had been too weak, too imperfect, to accomplish a national purpose. The 13 states were jealous of one another. The common men threatened to overthrow the men of estate who constituted the various state governments. These leaders, state loyalists all, drew together and built a rock on which to stand in strength.

By their signing of this Constitution 178 years ago a revolution was changed into a Federal Government. And because Federal power was feared by the very men who ordained it, they wrote into the Constitution the safeguards, the checks and balances, which have permitted it to survive years of attack, corrosion and erosion, a civil war, and human deceit.

This Consitution, a covenant among the various states, is the base on which stands the most powerful nation in the world today. True, its battles are not done. The struggle to centralize power and make men supreme over law goes on. But the nation resists. The people fight back --because they have something to fight for.

The mighty pursuit of "a more perfect union" has become a battle to preserve the original meaning and purpose of the Consitution, for its enemies are many and they reside in high places.

Like WASHINGTON, FRANKLIN, HAMILTON, MASON, RANDOLPH, MORRIS, PINCKNEY, PATERSON, GERRY, DICKINSON and the other delegates who framed the Constitution, Americans today cry out loud and clear against the excesses which would destroy what made a nation.

In an urgent voice, the people insist on a Federal Government that rejects tyranny, and separates power. And this must be, to safeguard justice and tranquility, to provide common defense, to promote general welfare, and to "secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

The reason that the United Stares is sending troops to Viet Nam is because this country's leaders do not want to see the Communists take over Southeast Asia.

This is a worthy purpose. We support the war effort there because it is necessary in the national interest.

But winning the war is something else again. It is impossible. The best hope is for a stalemate--a settlement in which the Communists can be kept from controlling South Viet Nam. In this way their encroachment can be restricted as it was in Korea. It may be necessary for the United States to keep troops in Viet Nam for many years after the fighting ends.

A report by Quakers points up why the war can't be won.

A three-member Quaker investigating team just back from Southeast Asia concluded that "90 per cent of the Vietnamese people feel that they have no real stake in this war" and that a military victory "will turn to ashes" if the United States continues its present course.

It is very difficult to help a people who don't want to be helped.

If the United States is in the war to save South Viet Nam it is because this country wants to save it and not because the Vietnamese have the desire. They couldn't care less.

It still is necessary to prevent the Communist takeover in South Viet Nam from OUR standpoint. That's why this country is fighting there and it is the only reason.

It is going to be difficult to continue to protect these indifferent people after the war is over. But even if they dislike it or are indifferent to our continued presence, this country's intervention makes sense.

It is we who cares who holds South Viet Nam.

Quakers are trying to end the war and bring it to the bargaining table. There is no indication that they are having any better luck than President Lyndon B. Johnson or Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

The board of the American Friends Service Committee met in Philadelphia last week to receive the report of its investigating team and to consider ways to bring the war closer to the bargaining table.

The Missouri Highway Patrol will start a recruiting, testing and training program for 145 new troopers in October. The increase in personnel, which was provided by the last session of the Legislature, will require four training classes, the last of which will be in October, 1966.

Colonel Hugh H. Waggoner, Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, says that he is looking for young men who are interested in making a career of law enforcement who can meet the requirements.

The Patrol law, which sets out that new members are to be selected on a bipartisan basis and that applicants shall not be discriminated against because of race, creed and color, has created some problems for Colonel Waggoner.

Those meeting the requirements are given rigid physical and mental tests.

Those from the two political parties making the highest grades are then investigated before being accepted for an eight-week police training course at the Patrol Academy in Rolla. Having successfully completed the training, they are commissioned as probationary patrolmen.

Applications are available at each of the nine Highway Patrol troop headquarters. They are located at Lee's Summit, Macon, Kirkwood, Springfield, Poplar Bluff, Jefferson City, Willow Springs, St. Joseph and Rolla.

The white - haired gentleman, Sen. George Aiken, had, in the jargon of the entertainment world's Variety, laid an egg. He did so the other day because he had not done his homework.

He went before an audience of 300 delegates to the 30th convention of the United Electrical Workers! (UE) union and had averred that the U.S. would meet the challenge of world pressures -- including those in Viet Nam. So strong was the silence, one could have heard a dialectic drop. And them he added:

". . . His (President Johnson's) appointment of Arthur Goldberg, trained in the school of labor diplomacy, should yield rich fruit in the field of international diplomacy."

The Sphinx has been garrulous compared to the delegates' stony reaction. Obviously the speech of the Senator, ranking member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, the Aeronautical and Space Sciences Committee and the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, was not quite reaching the audience.

It is regrettable no one told the gentle Senator that Arthur Goldberg, then a labor lawyer, had led the fight to oust this very union from the labor movement back in 1949. Counselor Goldberg's argument then asserted that the UE and many of its leaders had echoed the Soviet's cold war line and had no place inside labor.

On the surface there appears to be good reason for the Senator's willingness to address this union's convention. It, after all, does have thousands of members in such vital complexes as General Electric, Westinghouse, McGraw - Edison and Sylvania.

Had the soft-spoken 73-year-old New England Republican researched the union's contemporary literature, he would have learned that it obviously did not believe the U.S. would meet "the challenge." Nor did some of its left-wing officials care much for America's efforts to meet that challenge.

At least a few phrases from that literature should be put on the record since the UE now is recovering from its old misfortunes and is about to launch wide organizing drives in many industrial centers.

The officers, for example, deem the following excerpts from its convention reports "properly critical" of the U.S.:

"In Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic the issue is crystal clear. Shall the people have the right to determine their own future, and government chosen by them, or have their future and government determined for them by the U.S. If the latter is the continued policy of the U.S. government, then the direction is inevitably towards nuclear war, as no people can, or will, accept a new colonial status which such policy makes implicit.

"The policy of the U.S., as applied in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic, is in the direction of destroying the possibility of peace based on the co-existence of states with different social systems. It is a policy of insisting on the right of the U.S. to impose a system on peoples by military force."

Then came an attack on George Meany and the other labor men who are backing U.S. policy on the Caribbean and China Sea fronts. The "Meany-type leadership" is assailed in the literature, which was on the delegates' tables during the Senator's speech. It is accused of having "effectively muted the voice of the working people, making them virtually ineffective in the most important of all struggles. . ."

The UE leaders assert they regard their struggle for their foreign policy as their "most important and sacred obligation."

This then is the nature of the UE which has just won jurisdiction over 1,100 employes at the Waynesboro, Va., General Electric plant. This then is the UE whose most forceful leader, James Matles, general secretary - treasurer, rarely has deviated from the Soviet line according to quantitative testimony before such Congressional committees as the House Labor and Education group.

Politics doesn't necessarily make strangers bedfellows. But it is a tricky business. Audiences always should be researched.

COMMUNIST POLAND: TEST CASE FOR FOREIGN AID

It was quite a long time ago that the State Department in Washington decided suddenly that we liked Poland's communist Premier Gomulka and that surely we could persuade him to like us. In fact, it was more than eight years ago that our large-scale foreign aid to communist Poland got underway. It has been going on ever since.

Gomulka and the Communist Party of Poland are happy to get our money. There can be no doubt it comes in handy in helping to shore up the rickety system by which they enslave a nation of millions with a proud history of loving liberty. For a while, before they were sure of us, Poland's leaders felt they had to make a few noises that would sound like a kind of "independence" from Moscow. Now they no longer bother even to make the noises.

For many years, American tax money has been flowing into communist-ruled Poland to help build, among other things, an $11 million hospital in the Polish city of Krakow, where the socialized medical division of the all-embracing Polish state could luxuriate in new and sumptuous quarters. This year the building of the hospital was complete, and our Vice President and 40 members of Congress asked Poland's communist bosses please to let them come and attend the ceremony dedicating the hospital to the communist state.

Gomulka and his henchmen turned them down. Secretary of State Dean Rusk is reported as saying: "I am awfully worried about Poland. It has been uncooperative and I am very disappointed with its leaders."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Food and Drug inspectors are conducting a quiet but urgent nationwide search for contaminated or mislabeled parenteral drugs, the life-saving solutions used for intravenous feeding.

At least one hospital in Coral Gables, Fla., has complained that bad drugs may have been to blame for the loss of several patients who should have survived their operations.

The parenteral drug scare was touched off by trouble with one of the largest producers, Abbott Laboratories of North Chicago, which has been compelled repeatedly to recall dangerous drugs from hospitals and doctors' offices.

This column has also discovered that the Food and Drug Administration's compliance chief, Allan Rayfield, phoned the Chicago office one morning and ordered its inspectors to end the Abbott investigation by noon.

Rayfield normally receives his instructions from Deputy Commissioner John Harvey, whose brother, I. D. Harvey, is a regional sales manager for Abbott.

Rayfield explained to this column that he has charge of all Food and Drug investigations.

"It was my judgment at the time," he said, "that the Abbott inspection could be completed by a certain time."

He added that he had spoken about Abbott only once to the deputy commissioner, who immediately declared he had a brother working for the company.

"That was the last time I discussed Abbott with him," said Rayfield.

AGENTS CHANGE SIDES

This column has also learned that two Food and Drug inspectors, Cornelius Flynn and William Truskowski, were offered higher salaries by Abbott in the middle of the investigation. Both went to work for the company they had been investigating.

John Guill, director of the agency's Chicago office, pointed out that the government had no power to prevent the pair from going to work for anyone they pleased. He said they had contributed "nothing of regulatory significance" to the Abbott case.

He acknowledged, however, that Truskowski had completed an assignment at the Abbott plant even after he had made known his intention to join the company. He had gone to the plant, Guill said, merely to pick up some samples.

The first crackdown on Abbott came a year ago after the discovery that 45 batches of injectables had the wrong labels or bottle caps. Since many doctors identify a solution by its cap, the mixup could have had serious consequences.

Food and Drug inspectors concluded, according to an internal document that "all parenteral drugs produced by the firm by the same methods and using the same facilities and controls are adulterated within the meaning of (the law)."

$800,000 MIXUP

Summoned to Washington for a conference, Abbott's representatives admitted, according to the confidential minutes, "except where a hospital might notify a doctor of a label mix-up, doctors were not being told of this label mixup."

Food and Drug officials demanded that doctors be notified at once and that "a warning letter would not be soon enough or adequate."

The company agreed to send out telegrams and reportedly spent $800,000 to recall the mislabeled bottles.

The government followed up with a show-cause order, then a formal hearing which the company requested be held in Washington. The transcript was forwarded to the Chicago office, however, for a decision.

Guill told this column that he decided not to prosecute because Abbott was "a highly responsible firm."

"It was Abbott," he said, "that called the mixup to our attention in the first place. This firm has been meticulous about notifying us of any trouble, and has pulled its questionable goods off the market without quibbling. With their tremendous production, some trouble is almost inevitable."

TROUBLE IN THE LAB

After prosecution was dropped, however, the company was obliged to issue four more recalls. As late as August 24, Food and Drug asked the U.S. attorney in Denver to seize several cases of Abbott products.

"Examination shows that the article is non-sterile," the request stated.

A company spokesman refused to discuss any aspect of this story, except to say that Deputy Commissioner Harvey's brother had been with the firm for 35 years.

Meanwhile, the Abbott case has led Food and Drug inspectors across the country to check on all brands of parenteral drugs, since these dextrose, saline and other miracle solutions are essential for saving lives.

"We have found things that shouldn't be in the bottles," a Food and Drug spokesman acknowledged to this column. "But this country still has the best drugs in the world."

Note: Inspectors are satisfied that a Los Angeles boy who was injected with deadly alochol out of an Abbott bottle supposedly containing a parenteral preparation was the victim of sabotage. They believe a disgruntled hospital employee deliberately filled the bottle with alcohol.

Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson are continuing to score newsbeats in the Washington Merry-Go-Round. Here is an addition to their remarkable, continuing record:

Pope's Visit -- Pearson, reporting Aug. 6, 1964, on his audience with the Pope, quoted his Holiness as saying of a possible trip to the United States, "With God's help I hope someday to come." The Pope arrives Oct. 4.

Pakistan - India War -- Six years ago, in Dec., 1959, when Pearson visited Pakistan and India, he warned of the danger of the arms buildup in that area and cited the tremendous amount of arms the U. S. was pouring into Pakistan as likely to cause war.

In subsequent columns, Pearson repeated this warning. He also called attention to the military dictatorship of Pakistan and the difficulty the U. S. would have in controlling it.

Russian What -- On Aug. 23, 1965, Pearson reported that Sen. George McGovern, D-N. D., was considering a drive to force George Meany and the administration not to carry wheat to Russia in non-foreign bottoms or he would withhold his support of repeal of Section 14-B of the Taft-Hartley Act and the right-to-work laws. This was front page news in all the papers.

Peace Negotiations Re Viet Nam -- On Aug. 14, 1965, Pearson published a partial text of a secret memo which the United States has sent to Great Britain, France, and other friendly governments outlining our offers to North Viet Nam to secure peace negotiations. Twelve days later, the British, publishing a white paper, printed the text of this memo.

JFK and Dean Rusk -- The sensation in diplomatic circles has been Arthur Schlesinger's revelation, in his book published in August, that the late President Kennedy was planning to ease out Dean Rusk. During the Cuban missile showdown in Oct., 1962, the Washington Merry-Go-Round published an immediate release stating there was friction between Rusk and the President and that Rusk resented the President's going over his head to confer with McGeorge Bundy.

Pearson's story was officially denied by Rusk but now is partially substantiated by the Schlesinger book.

Water Shortage -- Pearson has published a series of columns on the New York water shortage in which he was well ahead of most other correspondents. He was the first to charge wanton leaks in the city of New York and the failure of New York to install water meters.

Later, Secretary Udall made this charge publicly and Mayor Wagner has now declared a limited policy of installing individual meters and has hired a battery of experts to plug up leaks.

Abe Fortas to the Supreme Court -- In an immediate release story, Pearson told how Abe Fortas had declined the President's offer to go on the Supreme Court. Four days later, July 24, 1965, President Johnson, after appointing Fortas, explained that Fortas had turned down the job but that he had persuaded him to change his mind.

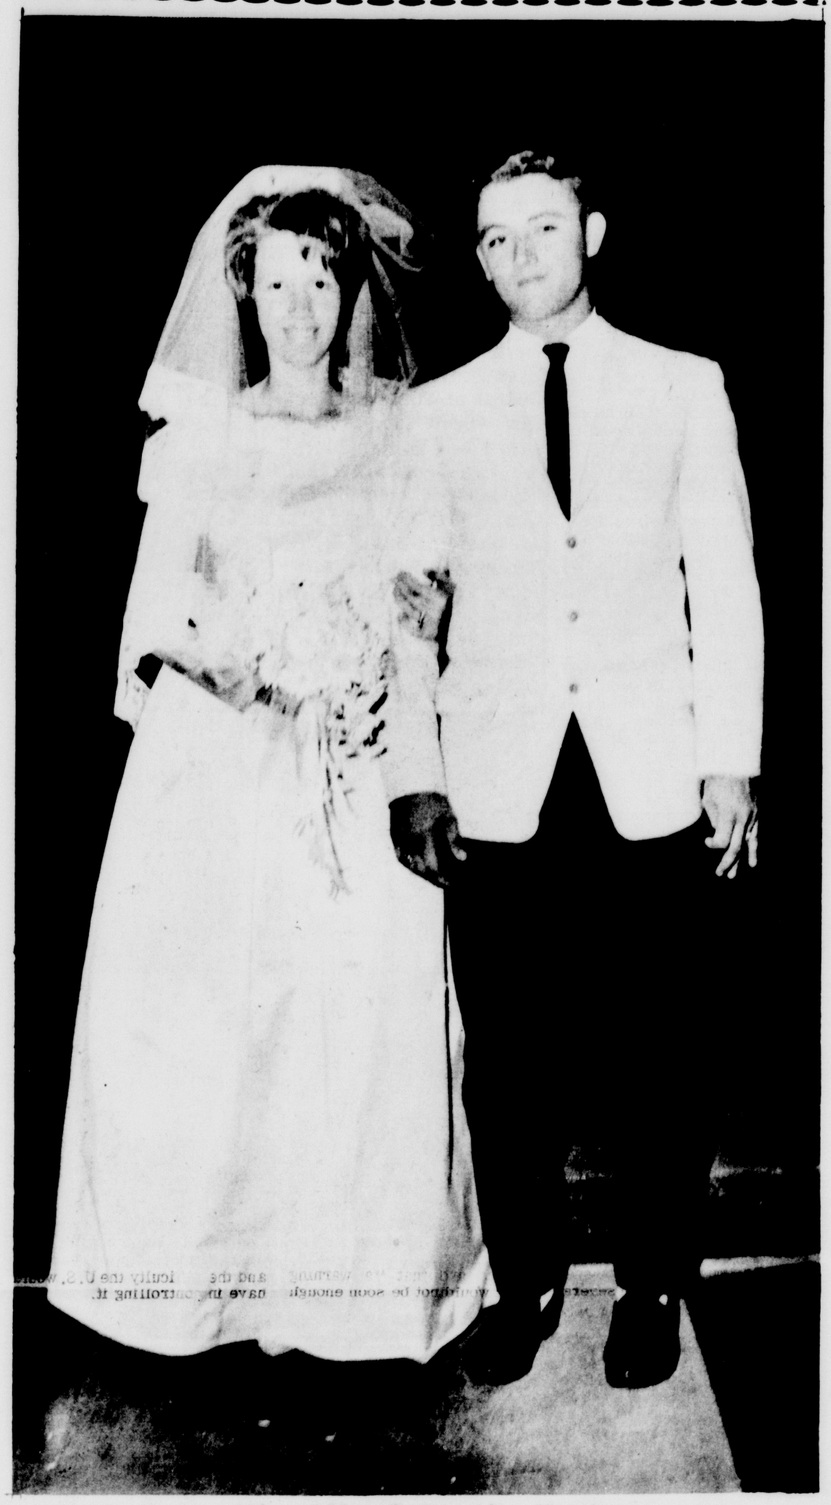

Bay of Pigs Opposition -- Immediately after the Bay of Pigs fiasco, on May 9, 1961, Pearson told how Chester Bowles, then Under Secretary of State, had opposed the President's Bay of Pigs policy. Last month, Arthur Schlesinger substantiated this in his book and gave further details.

This is part of the recent box score of the Washington Merry-Go-Round.

Miss Donna Green Says Vows With George Morris Sept. 5

The Southside Church of Christ was the setting Sunday, Sept. 5, at 3:30 p.m. of the wedding of Miss Donna Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harl Green of Route one, Sikeston, and George Morris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo McCormick, also of Sikeston.

The church was decorated with arrangements of white gladioli.

WEDDING MUSIC

The bridesmaids preceded the bride down the bridal aisle to the music of "O Promise Me."

GIVEN IN MARRIAGE

The bride came down the aisle on the arm of her father who gave her in marriage. "The Wedding March" was played while they approached the altar. The bride wore a gown of white satin fashioned with a floor-length skirt. The skirt was straight in front and soft pleats added at the sides and back formed a bouffant look in back. The bodice was styled with a scalloped neckline and long tapered sleeves that came to points over the hands. The train was attached at the middle back bodice with a large bow and flowed to fullness to the back of the skirt. Embroidered motifs accented with sequins and pearls decorated the bodice, the skirt front and chapel train.

Her headpiece was a crown of pearls and sequins encircled with an elbow-length veil of silk illusion trimmed in Chantilly lace. She carried a cascade arrangement of white pompons centered with carnations with white French ribbons flowing down into lovers' knots.

The double ring ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Cleatus Lemmons of Bell City.

Miss Brenda Mays, a close friend of the bride, served as maid of honor. She was attired in a street-length dress of white satin overlaid with white chiffon featuring a scalloped neckline. The lace bodice was styled with long sleeves coming to points at the wrists.

Her headpiece was styled with a small crown of sequins and pearls to which was attached an ice blue net veil. She wore matching shoes and carried a bouquet of white pompons to complete her attire.

The bridesmaids, Miss Porshia Morris, sister of the groom, and Miss Pat Duckett, a friend of the couple, wore gowns identical to that of the maid of honor.

Little Miss Wendy Baker served the couple as flower girl. She wore an ice blue dress of brocade accented with lace. White shoes completed her outfit and she carried a white basket of pompons.

GROOM'S ATTENDANTS

John Cummings of Sikeston served Mr. Morris as best man. Mike Underhill and Alan Joe Byrd, both of Sikeston, were groomsmen. Ushers were Tommy Dover and Bill Taylor, both of Sikeston. Master Hank McCormick, brother of the groom, was ringbearer. He carried the rings on a white satin and lace pillow. The men of the wedding party wore white coats and dark trousers and white carnation boutonnieres.

Mrs. Green selected for her daughter's wedding a blue two piece dress of lace over satin with black and white accessories. She wore a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. McCormick wore a two piece dress of lace over satin with black accessories. She also wore a white carnation corsage.

RECEPTION

Immediately following the ceremony, the newly wed couple received their guests in the annex building directly behind the church. The bride's table was covered with blue overlaid with white lace. The crystal punch bowl and a three tiered wedding cake topped with the traditional bride and groom appointed the table.

Mrs. Shirley Schwab of Holden, sister of the bride, and Miss Janet Odle of Sikeston were in charge of serving at the reception.

Miss Diane Evans was in charge of the guest register.

Modern Christian

Why did Christ choose water as a means of salvation?

Christ was born of a Hebrew family and was steeped in the scriptural imagery and theology of the Old Testament.

Rain is life to the seed beneath the soil; irrigation renews parched lands. In seasons of drought, water becomes as precious as life itself. The Hebrew nomad and farmer knew that water brought life, and thus water came to symbolize life.

However, hurricanes rip cities apart, and tidal waves sweep away everything in their path. Water also has a destructive symbolism.

The precise details of the biblical deluge may elude us, but the symbolism is clear. Sinful men, during the time of Noah, were drowned. Water destroyed those who were alien to God. The baptized come forth like Noah, rescued from the death of sin. Water is both death-dealing and life-giving in symbolism. In the crossing of the Sea of Reeds, the enemies of God were lost, but the people of God were saved. Total immersion in baptism vividly portrays this symbolism.

Christ was well aware of the many Old Testament events where the natural symbolism of water was an important factor. The River Jordan was rich in tradition. Joshua had led the tribes across the Jordan into the Promised Land. When the faithful Hebrew entered its waters and came out again, it reminded Him of this saving event from Israel's history.

The baptism by John the Baptist was like washing sinners in sacred waters. Christ did not choose water by accident. He realized that material elements common to man could be used as avenues to His Father.

He brought to fulfillment the symbolism of water by His one and eternal death-life event.

Miss Donna Green Says Vows With George Morris Sept. 5

The Southside Church of Christ was the setting Sunday, Sept. 5, at 3:30 p.m. of the wedding of Miss Donna Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harl Green of Route one, Sikeston, and George Morris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo McCormick, also of Sikeston.

The church was decorated with arrangements of white gladioli.

WEDDING MUSIC

The bridesmaids preceded the bride down the bridal aisle to the music of "O Promise Me."

GIVEN IN MARRIAGE

The bride came down the aisle on the arm of her father who gave her in marriage. "The Wedding March" was played while they approached the altar. The bride wore a gown of white satin fashioned with a floor-length skirt. The skirt was straight in front and soft pleats added at the sides and back formed a bouffant look in back. The bodice was styled with a scalloped neckline and long tapered sleeves that came to points over the hands. The train was attached at the middle back bodice with a large bow and flowed to fullness to the back of the skirt. Embroidered motifs accented with sequins and pearls decorated the bodice, the skirt front and chapel train.

Her headpiece was a crown of pearls and sequins encircled with an elbow-length veil of silk illusion trimmed in Chantilly lace. She carried a cascade arrangement of white pompons centered with carnations with white French ribbons flowing down into lovers' knots.

The double ring ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Cleatus Lemmons of Bell City.

Miss Brenda Mays, a close friend of the bride, served as maid of honor. She was attired in a street-length dress of white satin overlaid with white chiffon featuring a scalloped neckline. The lace bodice was styled with long sleeves coming to points at the wrists.

Her headpiece was styled with a small crown of sequins and pearls to which was attached an ice blue net veil. She wore matching shoes and carried a bouquet of white pompons to complete her attire.

The bridesmaids, Miss Porshia Morris, sister of the groom, and Miss Pat Duckett, a friend of the couple, wore gowns identical to that of the maid of honor.

Little Miss Wendy Baker served the couple as flower girl. She wore an ice blue dress of brocade accented with lace. White shoes completed her outfit and she carried a white basket of pompons.

GROOM'S ATTENDANTS

John Cummings of Sikeston served Mr. Morris as best man. Mike Underhill and Alan Joe Byrd, both of Sikeston, were groomsmen. Ushers were Tommy Dover and Bill Taylor, both of Sikeston. Master Hank McCormick, brother of the groom, was ringbearer. He carried the rings on a white satin and lace pillow. The men of the wedding party wore white coats and dark trousers and white carnation boutonnieres.

Mrs. Green selected for her daughter's wedding a blue two piece dress of lace over satin with black and white accessories. She wore a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. McCormick wore a two piece dress of lace over satin with black accessories. She also wore a white carnation corsage.

RECEPTION

Immediately following the ceremony, the newly wed couple received their guests in the annex building directly behind the church. The bride's table was covered with blue overlaid with white lace. The crystal punch bowl and a three tiered wedding cake topped with the traditional bride and groom appointed the table.

Mrs. Shirley Schwab of Holden, sister of the bride, and Miss Janet Odle of Sikeston were in charge of serving at the reception.

Miss Diane Evans was in charge of the guest register.

OUT-OF-TOWN GUESTS

Out-of-town guests attending the ceremony were Mrs. Lola Grissom of Morley, the Rev. ans Mrs. C. G. Lemmons of Bell City, Mrs. Pauline Britton and Mrs. Barbara Johnson, both of Bell City and Dr. and Mrs. Edward T. Schwab and sons, Craig and Keith of Holden.

Modern Christian

Why did Christ choose water as a means of salvation?

Christ was born of a Hebrew family and was steeped in the scriptural imagery and theology of the Old Testament.

Rain is life to the seed beneath the soil; irrigation renews parched lands. In seasons of drought, water becomes as precious as life itself. The Hebrew nomad and farmer knew that water brought life, and thus water came to symbolize life.

However, hurricanes rip cities apart, and tidal waves sweep away everything in their path. Water also has a destructive symbolism.

The precise details of the biblical deluge may elude us, but the symbolism is clear. Sinful men, during the time of Noah, were drowned. Water destroyed those who were alien to God. The baptized come forth like Noah, rescued from the death of sin. Water is both death-dealing and life-giving in symbolism. In the crossing of the Sea of Reeds, the enemies of God were lost, but the people of God were saved. Total immersion in baptism vividly portrays this symbolism.

Christ was well aware of the many Old Testament events where the natural symbolism of water was an important factor. The River Jordan was rich in tradition. Joshua had led the tribes across the Jordan into the Promised Land. When the faithful Hebrew entered its waters and came out again, it reminded Him of this saving event from Israel's history.

The baptism by John the Baptist was like washing sinners in sacred waters. Christ did not choose water by accident. He realized that material elements common to man could be used as avenues to His Father.

He brought to fulfillment the symbolism of water by His one and eternal death-life event.

Pirates To Meet Bulldogs

SIKESTON -- Sikeston's first Bulldog conference game of the season is to be held tonight with the Perryville Pirates. They are co-defending champions of the North Conference. The Bulldogs lost to the Pirates last year making it Sikeston's only loss of the season.

Bulldog Coach Bill Sapp said: "We are better off mentally this season because Perryville beat us last season; however, physically we are worse off because three of our boys are temporarily out of action."

When the dogs meet the Pirates there is no telling what will happen. Perryville has many inexperienced players and three of the starting Bulldogs are sitting it out tonight. The Pirates feel as though they are as prepared as they can be this early in the season. The Pirates' line average is 160 pounds and their backfield average is around 146 pounds. The Sea Robbers intend to take to the air only enough to keep the Dog defense honest.

Pirate Coach Robert King said: "Our passing phase is not so strong but we will keep the ball in the air enough to prevent the defense from stacking up on us. We do respect the Sikeston Bulldogs as we always have. They did not have to earn their respect. Everyone respected them before I came here and everyone knew about them."

The fastest Dog playing tonight is Terry Scudder who runs the hundred in 10.8. Perryville's quickest Pirate is Quarterback Larry Smith who runs the hundred in 11 flat.

Missouri Faces Kentucky

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Missouri faces ambitious Kentucky and top-ranked Nebraska meets Texas Christian in the only home games on the Big Eight's tough seven-game opening football schedule Saturday.

The Missouri - Kentucky and Colorado-Wisconsin games are close to even, with the Big Eight team a slight underdog in each. Both Missouri and Colorado must win, however, to pull the Big Eight over the break-even mark for the day.

Only Nebraska's brawny, talented defending champions and Iowa State, which plays intrastate rival Drake at Des Moines, are favored to win.

Oklahoma State, a dark horse in the league, is the underdog against Arkansas, ranked no. 6 nationally in the pre-season poll after an 11-0 mark in 1964 and a Cotton Bowl victory over Nebraska. It will be a night game at Little Rock.

A crippled Kansas team, with its no. 1 and no. 2 quarterbacks both doubtful, is given little chance against potent Texas Tech, led by All America halfback Donny Anderson. It's a night game at Lubbock.

Indiana appears to have too much power, speed and brawn for Kansas State in their regionally televised game at Indiana.

Nebraska coach Bob Devaney is concerned about TCU's strong secondary and the run-pass talents of quarterback Kent Nix. A capacity crowd of 54,000 plus is expecting an impressive victory. They probably will get it. Bob Churchich will start at quarterback but will get some competition from Fred Duda. Ends Tony Jeter and Freeman White will behard for TCU to stop.

The Missouri-Kentucky battle should be one of the nation's best intersectional games.

Both Missouri and Kentucky have league title, top ten and bowl game ambitions. It matches Rick Norton, Kentucky's talented drop-back passer who led the Southeastern conference in total offense and passing, against Missouri's Gary Lane, a swift runner and good sprint - out passer who is a two-time Big Eight total offense champion. A crowd of 42,000 will watch.

Colorado's talented sophomores must have consistency to overcome Wisconsin's strong, veteran defensive unit at Madison. The Badgers have a good air game. K-State will need some big play by its veteran defensive unit to compete with potent Indiana.

Iowa State will unveil a new air game led by Tim Van Calder, a talented drop-back passer. The Cyclones are sophomoric, but should get by Drake.

OSU could scare Arkansas with a few breaks, but the Razorbacks figure to have too much speed and depth.

Oklahoma opens Sept. 25 at Pittsburgh.

Light workouts and sick bay reports were the order of the day Thursday in Big eight camps.

Bill Fenton, junior quarterback, has recovered from a viral-like illness and will start for Kansas in Saturday's game against Texas Tech at Lubbock.

The Jayhawks ran through play patterns and Coach Jack Mitchell said they were more consistent than last week, especially in blocking assignments.

Injured quarterback Bob Sinahan will be among the 46 players making the trip but is expected to see little if any action.

Offensive right halfback Earl Denny of Missouri is expected to see only spot action Saturday due to an injured knee. Starting in his place will be Monroe Phelps, who was the Tigers' leading ground-gainer when a knee injury forced him out mid-way through the 1963 season.

Coach Doug Weaver named three co-captains for Saturday. They are ends Bill Mahan and Bob Nichols and halfback Jim Grechus.

The Nebraska Cornhuskers drilled in light rain Thursday, also Oklahoma polished plays for its Sept. 25 opener with Pitt.

Sooner Coach Gomer Jones said neither fullback Joe Kennedy nor defensive tackle Phil Weatherbee probably would be ready for the game.

Oklahoma State's Phil Cutchin named a 49-man traveling squad for its opener with Arkansas.

The only thing Willie Mays did was get egg on his shirt but the San Francisco Giants took another long stride toward tucking the National League pennant in their back pocket.

Playing without Mays for only the sixth time this season, the Giants reeled off their 14th straight victory by beating Houston 5-1 Thursday night and stretched their lead to 4 1/2 games over Cincinnati and Los Angeles.

Mays took part in a pregame egg-throwing contest and finished out of the money after one of the eggs broke in his hand and splattered. Then he sat down on orders from Manager Herman Franks, his day's work done.

It was the 15th time this season Franks had decided to give Mays a rest but only the sixth time he was not forced to use him at some point in the game.

The Giants, meanwhile, made the most of Cincinnati's loss to the New York Mets, tacked one full game on their lead and assumed a commanding position with time running out on the Reds and Dodgers.

The Giants now have 16 games left - including seven with the Reds. If they play .500 ball the rest of the way, the Reds and Dodgers will have to win 12 of their remaining 15 games to finish in a tie. Los Angeles and Cincinnati meet three more times.

The Giants move on to Milwaukee tonight for the opener of a three-game series. The Reds, who lost to the Mets 7-3, are at home for a three-game set against Houston and the Dodgers who downed the Chicago Cubs 2-0, open a three-game series at St. Louis.

In other NL games Thursday, foruth-place Milwaukee slipped seven games back after an 8-6 loss at Philadelphia and fifth-place Pittsburgh fell 9 1/2 games behind, dropping a 2-1 decision to St. Louis.

Dave Morehead of the Boston Red Sox pitched a no-hitter in a 2-0 victory over Cleveland in the only American League game played.

The Giants got the job done against the Astros with a four-run first inning uprising, Willie McCovey's third inning homer and the six-hit pitching of Bob Bolin.

Johnny Stephenson did most of the damage aginst the Reds. The Mets catcher, who had only one homer going into the game, hit a three-run shot in the third inning and a solo homer in the eighth. He also beat out a bunt for a single in the sixth and scored on a squeeze bunt by pitcher Al Jackson.

Sandy Koufax, the Dodgers 22-game winner, made his second relief appearance of the season in the ninth inning against the Cubs, setting them down 1-2-3 after Claude Osteen had walked lead off man Billy Williams. Osteen, now 14-14, allowed only five hits before Koufax took over.

The Phillies downed the Braves with a three-run eighth inning rally in which Dick Stuart doubled in the tie-breaking run and then Rich Allen smacked a two-run single. Stuart and Johnny Callison homered for Philadelphia while Eddie Mathews connected for Milwaukee.

The Cardinals snapped a 1-1 tie in the eight-inning against the Pirates when Bob Tolan singled, moved up on a sacrifice and scored on Lou Brock's single. Tracy Stallard got the victory for an 11-7 record.

Biggest Bonus In Baseball History

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Rick Reichardt, baseball's Joe Namath, is nicknamed Jingles. But he's just beginning to ring the bell.

Reichardt, who received the biggest bonus in baseball history when he signed with California for an estimated $200,000 last year, hit the first homer of his major league career Wednesday night and also collected three other hits as the Angels split with Chicago.

The White Sox won the opener 8-1 but the Angels took the nightcap 2-1 in 14 innings.

The four hits lifted Reichardt's batting average to .321 since he was recalled from Seattle of the Pacific Coast League, where he continued his unspectacular but steady climb without being shoved into the spotlight as much as Namath.

Reeling off their seventh straight victory, the Minnesota Twins reduced their magic pennant-clinching number to six by edging Kansas City 7-5.

Any combination of Minnesota victories and losses by Baltimore totaling six will bring the Twins their first American League pennant.

The Orioles rode Boog Powell's fifth homer in six games to a 3-2 victory over Detroit, Mel Sottlemyre posted his 18th victory as the New York Yankees defeated Washington 5-3 and Cleveland snapped a four-game losing streak by belting Boston 8-4.

In the National League, San Francisco edged Houston 3-2, the Chicago Cubs defeated Los Angeles 8-6, Cincinnati nipped the New York Mets 2-1, Milwaukee downed Philadelphia 4-2 and St. Louis whipped Pittsburgh 7-3.

Pirates To Meet Bulldogs

SIKESTON -- Sikeston's first Bulldog conference game of the season is to be held tonight with the Perryville Pirates. They are co-defending champions of the North Conference. The Bulldogs lost to the Pirates last year making it Sikeston's only loss of the season.

Bulldog Coach Bill Sapp said: "We are better off mentally this season because Perryville beat us last season; however, physically we are worse off because three of our boys are temporarily out of action."

When the dogs meet the Pirates there is no telling what will happen. Perryville has many inexperienced players and three of the starting Bulldogs are sitting it out tonight. The Pirates feel as though they are as prepared as they can be this early in the season. The Pirates' line average is 160 pounds and their backfield average is around 146 pounds. The Sea Robbers intend to take to the air only enough to keep the Dog defense honest.

Pirate Coach Robert King said: "Our passing phase is not so strong but we will keep the ball in the air enough to prevent the defense from stacking up on us. We do respect the Sikeston Bulldogs as we always have. They did not have to earn their respect. Everyone respected them before I came here and everyone knew about them."

The fastest Dog playing tonight is Terry Scudder who runs the hundred in 10.8. Perryville's quickest Pirate is Quarterback Larry Smith who runs the hundred in 11 flat.

Missouri Faces Kentucky

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Missouri faces ambitious Kentucky and top-ranked Nebraska meets Texas Christian in the only home games on the Big Eight's tough seven-game opening football schedule Saturday.

The Missouri - Kentucky and Colorado-Wisconsin games are close to even, with the Big Eight team a slight underdog in each. Both Missouri and Colorado must win, however, to pull the Big Eight over the break-even mark for the day.

Only Nebraska's brawny, talented defending champions and Iowa State, which plays intrastate rival Drake at Des Moines, are favored to win.

Oklahoma State, a dark horse in the league, is the underdog against Arkansas, ranked no. 6 nationally in the pre-season poll after an 11-0 mark in 1964 and a Cotton Bowl victory over Nebraska. It will be a night game at Little Rock.

A crippled Kansas team, with its no. 1 and no. 2 quarterbacks both doubtful, is given little chance against potent Texas Tech, led by All America halfback Donny Anderson. It's a night game at Lubbock.

Indiana appears to have too much power, speed and brawn for Kansas State in their regionally televised game at Indiana.

Nebraska coach Bob Devaney is concerned about TCU's strong secondary and the run-pass talents of quarterback Kent Nix. A capacity crowd of 54,000 plus is expecting an impressive victory. They probably will get it. Bob Churchich will start at quarterback but will get some competition from Fred Duda. Ends Tony Jeter and Freeman White will be hard for TCU to stop.

The Missouri-Kentucky battle should be one of the nation's best intersectional games.

Both Missouri and Kentucky have league title, top ten and bowl game ambitions. It matches Rick Norton, Kentucky's talented drop-back passer who led the Southeastern conference in total offense and passing, against Missouri's Gary Lane, a swift runner and good sprint - out passer who is a two-time Big Eight total offense champion. A crowd of 42,000 will watch.

Colorado's talented sophomores must have consistency to overcome Wisconsin's strong, veteran defensive unit at Madison. The Badgers have a good air game. K-State will need some big play by its veteran defensive unit to compete with potent Indiana.

Iowa State will unveil a new air game led by Tim Van Galder, a talented drop-back passer. The Cyclones are sophomoric, but should get by Drake.

OSU could scare Arkansas with a few breaks, but the Razorbacks figure to have too much speed and depth.

Oklahoma opens Sept. 25 at Pittsburgh.

Light workouts and sick bay reports were the order of the day Thursday in Big eight camps.

Bill Fenton, junior quarterback, has recovered from a viral-like illness and will start for Kansas in Saturday's game against Texas Tech at Lubbock.

The Jayhawks ran through play patterns and Coach Jack Mitchell said they were more consistent than last week, especially in blocking assignments.

Injured quarterback Bob Shahan will be among the 46 players making the trip but is expected to see little if any action.

Offensive right halfback Earl Denny of Missouri is expected to see only spot action Saturday due to an injured knee. Starting in his place will be Monroe Phelps, who was the Tigers' leading ground-gainer when a knee injury forced him out mid-way through the 1963 season.

Coach Doug Weaver named three co-captains for Saturday. They are ends Bill Matan and Bob Nichols and halfback Jim Grechus.

The Nebraska Cornhuskers drilled in light rain Thursday, also Oklahoma polished plays for its Sept. 25 opener with Pitt.

Sooner Coach Gomer Jones said neither fullback Joe Kennedy nor defensive tackle Phil Weatherbee probably would be ready for the game.

Oklahoma State's Phil Cutchin named a 49-man traveling squad for its opener with Arkansas.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

On behalf of the King's Highway Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution I take the occasion of Citizenship Day of this Constitution Week, September 17, 1965, as proclaimed by Governor Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri, and Mayor Kendall Sikes of Sikeston, to express the appreciation of many of our citizens to the editors and publishers of the Sikeston Daily Standard for the many fine patriotic and educational articles published in the newspaper throughout the year.

Although the readers of the Daily Sikeston Standard are privileged to have many fine articles presented throughout the year which if read will certainly enhance the understanding of anyone of the superb form of government bequeathed to us by the men who framed the Constitution of The United States, it is fitting that we should have a time for special recognition of our constitution and what it really means to be a citizen living under its protection. The National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution takes pleasure in the fact that this organization played an important role in having September 17 designated as Citizenship Day and the week following as Constitution Week, by proclamation of the President of the United States, and many of the governors of states and mayors of cities throughout the United States, and in some cases permanently declared by the legislative bodies of the states.

In paying tribute, on September seventeenth, to the new citizens let us each remember what so many of them so poignantly know, that in no other country on earth is there such boundless opportunity for those who are willing to accept the challenge, so much freedom for every individual to choose his own way of life, and so much wealth of spirit, mind, and estate available to all who are willing to throw off the shackles of indolence. This is being proven every day.

We thank you for your many patriotic services to the Sikeston Community.

Yours truly,
Mrs. Rosemary Hayward
Chairman, Constitution Week Committee, King's Highway Chapter, DAR.

Hearing By NLRB Draws To Close

MALDEN--A hearing, being conducted by the National Labor Relations Board on charges filed by the International Molders and Allied Workers Union against the Sterling Division of Federal-Mogul Corporation for alleged violations of the Taft-Hartley Act, is expected to be concluded this week after eight weeks of testimony.

The hearing was begun in Poplar Bluff on July 25 and transferred to Malden the second week. Since that time all hearings have been conducted at what is known as the old operations building at the Malden Airport.

Sidney Barban, trial examiner for the N.L.R.B., has presided at the hearings. The union has been represented by their agents, Frank Carducci and Earl Schlesinger and their attorneys, Phillip Kaplan and Joseph H. Saline. Sterling has been represented by the law firm of Riddle, O'Herin and Newberry of Malden.

The action stems from an attempt by the International Molders Union to organize Sterling employees last fall. An election was held and the workers voted against the union, 146-106.

In its complaint filed with the NLRB, the union is seeking to have 36 employees reinstated whom they claimed were discharged by the company for union activities.

Also, they are seeking to have the election of Sept. 21, 1964, set aside on grounds that the Sterling Company engaged in unfair practices prior to the election.

In addition the union is seeking to obtain an order from federal court ordering Sterling to negotiate with the Molders Union as a bargaining agent without an election.

This order is being sought on the basis that the union claims they had a majority of the Sterling workers signed up prior to the election, but that company tactics destroyed this margin.

The case is being followed closely by members of the legal profession, unions and management, because of the important issues raised by the suit. It may ultimately be decided in the federal courts.

It's outcome is also being awaited with interest in Malden as more than 200 witnesses have been subpoenaed to testify in the case either by the union or by Sterling. Included among them have been former employees of Sterling, present employees of Sterling, several City of Malden officials and some businessmen.

Malden Tries To Place Responsibility For Safety

MALDEN -- Who has the responsibility of providing attendants at school crossings on Highway 25 in Malden? The State? The City? The School?

The question remains unanswered and the problem unsolved as efforts continue to determine the responsibility.

School stop signs on highway 25 at West Park Street and near the Pepsi-Cola Bottling plant in Malden were removed by the State Highway Department.

A spokesman for the State Highway Department said that the signs were removed to conform with a policy established in 1964. He said that the policy of the State Highway Department is that where a location is hazardous enough for a stop sign that adult supervision is needed. He said that it is up to the city and school to provide this supervision.

The city of Malden placed a new stop sign at West Park Street Monday morning and the school provided attendants at three crossings.

However, Monday night the Board of Education of Malden R-1 School said that they did not feel it was the school's responsibility to provide attendants at the school crossings. They ordered Superintendent Alva DaVault to discharge the attendants at the end of this week.

The board of education then met in session with the Malden city council to discuss the matter. They informed the council that it was their opinion that the city was responsible for patroling the streets and that the hiring of attendants was the city's responsbility.

The city council insisted that the children were the responsibility of the school from the tine they leave home in the morning until they return home in the afternoon and that it was the school's responsibility to provide adult supervision for the highway crossings.

After a lengthy discussion Mayor R. J. Dirks and Clarence Kilmer, a member of the school board, agreed to go to Sikeston to confer with State Highway Department officials as to who has the responsibility of providing the adult attendants as requested by the State Highway Department.

In the meantime stop signs installed by the city of Malden at the crossings will continue to be enforced.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

Michael Servetus, biblical scholar, physician and mathematician, had a faith that cost him almost 25 years of exile from his native Spain and eventually his life.

His biblical research was conducted during the Spanish Inquisition when thousands of Jews and Moslems were put to death for professing the Unity instead of the Trinity of God. From this research came two written works, "On the Errors of the Trinity" and "Dialogues on the Trinity." These have become cornerstones of the Unitarian faith.

Yet Servetus had no followers during his lifetime. He tried to get religious leaders of his time to restore Christianity to the simple state in which he believed it was conceived. He was never accepted by the leaders of the reformation, but it came as a complete surprise when he was arrested by John Calvin in Geneva in 1553, for he had expected to be welcomed by the Swiss Protestants. He was tried for heresy and convicted and was burned at the stake.

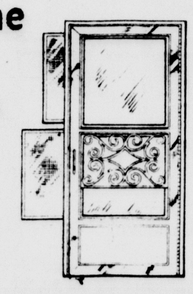

Servetus' goal was to "... get men to put their faith in a living God, in a divine Christ, who had been an historical reality, and in a Holy Spirit forever working in the hearts of men."

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

Michael Servetus, biblical scholar, physician and mathematician, had a faith that cost him almost 25 years of exile from his native Spain and eventually his life.

His biblical research was conducted during the Spanish Inquisition when thousands of Jews and Moslems were put to death for professing the Unity instead of the Trinity of God. From this research came two written works, "On the Errors of the Trinity" and "Dialogues on the Trinity." These have become cornerstones of the Unitarian faith.

Yet Servetus had no followers during his lifetime. He tried to get religious leaders of his time to restore Christianity to the simple state in which he believed it was conceived. He was never accepted by the leaders of the reformation, but it came as a complete surprise when he was arrested by John Calvin in Geneva in 1553, for he had expected to be welcomed by the Swiss Protestants. He was tried for heresy and convicted and was burned at the stake.

Servetus' goal was to ". . . get men to put their faith in a living God, in a divine Christ, who had been an historical reality, and in a Holy Spirit forever working in the hearts of men."

Past Discloses Why Russia Is Concerned

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

A look back illuminates the reasons why the Soviet Union is on edge about Red China's aims in Asia.

Moscow eagerness for a cease-fire in the India-Pakistan war reflects worry that Peking's activities can wreck Soviet world policy aims and produce chaos in Asia from which almost anything might develop.

What are Red China's aims? The Communist party paper Pravda assessed them two years ago in a searing blast at Peking's leaders. From the Kremlin standpoint, that assessment would be valid today.

According to Pravda, Red China was trying:

—To discredit, in the eyes on world Communists, the policy of peaceful coexistence as proclaimed by the Kremlin.

—To "set India at loggerheads with other Asian-African states." The implication was that this would force India into the Western camp, destroy her claim to nonalignment and give the Communist world a picture of the Soviet Union supporting a nation committed to "imperialism."

—To divorce the U.S.S.R. from the Asian-African nations and assert Red Chinese leadership over revolutionary movements, nullifying Soviet influence.

Moscow's suspicions were supported by many others, notably by Jawaharlal Nehru. Just before he died, Prime Minister Nehru told me in an interview that "China is keen on bringing about a situation in which India can no longer be considered a nonaligned nation."

Chinese-Indian frontier tension from 1959 onward led to military clashes late in 1962. The Soviet Union, haming withdrawn important economic aid from China, still was extending help to India, whose rulers Peking described as "reactionaries."

China turned savagely on the Russians.

In mid-1963, Moscow, Washington and London signed a treaty limiting nuclear tests. China denounced the Russians for "cooperating with U.S. imperialism and collaborating with India" in a struggle against the Red Chinese. Pravda retorted there was no reason for an India-China border conflict that could lead to escalated war. More than that, it was damaging world communism.

"Matters have gone so far of late that the conflict is being exploited to contaminate the atmosphere at various international forums," Pravda complained.

That is even more true today. The India-Pakistan conflict, China's role in it, Indonesia's support of Pakistan, and the fears of the rest of Asia and Africa all tend to shred the thin facade of unity of an Asian-African bloc.

China seems more determined than ever to keep the Russian foot out of the Asian-African door.

A FEW OBSERVATIONS ON THE MEANING OF THE EIGHTH AMENDMENT

Even as late as 1963 the Supreme Court of Delaware continued to sanction flogging as a constitutional mode of punishment, relying upon a case decided earlier in the year in which the court stated, inter alia:

The Supreme Court, however, has not as yet held the punishment of whipping, in itself, cruel. It has spoken of it as infamous, but that it possibly true of all punishment for crime.

The Eighth Amendment expresses the revulsion of civilized man against barbarous acts -- the "cry of horror" against man's inhumanity to his fellow man. . . .We note that in Great Britain the punishment of whipping was in use until 1948, and in Canada until 1957. Its discontinuance was accomplished by legislative act, not by judicial fiat. It does not seem to us that a punishment so recently in use in the country that leads the world in the administration of justice may be held to be a barbarity that, as a matter of constitutional law, must be deemed cruel and unusual.

Furthermore, it certainly is not without significance that the abolition of whipping as a punishment for crime in those States of the Union which in the past provided for it, has uniformly been accomplished by legislative action. Counsel have not cited to us any case, nor has our own search brought one to hand, in which a court as a matter of constitutional law held the punishment to be cruel and unusual and thus prohibited. We may assume, therefore, that in those States the matter was considered one for the legislative expression of the will of the people. We think the standards of present day society are to be determined by the expressions of that society, itself, and not by an expression of the individual opinions of members of the Judiciary. This standard must be a collective one and it can be determined only by an expression of views from the people which make up that society. The only manner in which such an expression can be made is through the action of duly elected representatives of the Society whose standard is to be applied.

Fertility & Sterility

NEW COMPOUNDS

Since secondary infertility encompasses not only a wide range of reproductive disorders but the problem of sterility due to unknown causes, a specific malfunction may be covered by the general effects of the relatively new estrogen-progestin compounds. These synthetic steroids act for the most part on the pituitary and ovaries, but their effects are also felt by the endometrium of the uterus.

Habitual miscarriage and a tendency toward entreme prematurity are frequently caused by the inability of the endometrium to support a fetus throughout the gestation period. When this fault is due to a hormonal imballance or deficiency, the estrogen-progestins bring support, provided the patient's edometrial tissue is capable of response.

Another uterine condition associated with infertility is that of endometriosis, in which endometrial cells migrate into the pelvic region, where they take root and proliferate. Why this should block conception is not fully understood, but the relationship is well established. There is evidence, however, that hormonal therapy can sometimes cause the migratory tissue to regress.

VALUE OF PRESISTENCE

Altogether, the modern treatment of infertility is an example of medical persistence. Where one corrective measure fails, it is being found, another or a combination of others may be effective. In one group of 1,000 infertile couples in whom success was achieved, more than one defect needed improving before conception was possible. "The message we get from this group," the supervising physician said, "is to work at anything possible, because anything may tip the balance. Correcting the first flaw you come across may not be enough."

And the rewards of success, it seems, are shared by the physician. In the words of Dr. Edward T. Tyler, chairman of postgraduate fertility courses at the University of California at Los Angeles, "The satisfaction of bringing children into a childless home is great indeed, and many physicians find no phase of medical practice more richly rewarding."

While shopping for some Christmas cheer at our local branch of the Liquor Control Board, I decided to buy a liqueur. Listed on the board was a "four-compartment" bottle, but there was no indication of what liqueurs were in the bottle. When I asked one of the clerks if he could tell me what they were, he admitted that he did not know, but said he would find out.

In a few minutes he returned with the following information: "Ma'm, that bottle contains Cherry Brandy, Cointreau, Creme de Menthe and Triple SEX."

Now, I ask you, who could resist a bargain like that?

HEATED WATER ADDS MONTHS TO USE OF BACKYARD SWIMMING POOLS

Hundreds of thousands of American families now have their own backyard swimming pools. Half of these are heated. This means the family can start using the pool earlier in the spring and enjoy it several months longer in the fall.

The cost of installing and heating a private pool has gone down drastically in recent years. Furthermore, the pool can be purchased on time payments, just like any other home improvement, and it also upgrades the resale value of the home. An experienced plumbing contractor can give you details.

PLUMBER'S ANCESTRY GOES BACK TO ANCIENT ROME

Plumbing is one of the most ancient crafts. Today's plumbing contractor is a direct descendant of the Roman "plumbaruis," which means a worker in lead. He got his name from the lead pipe that was used in the famous Baths that were the glory of ancient Rome, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

Today's pipelines are, of course, made from a variety of metals and other materials. And like their ancestor, the plumbarius, who had to serve a long apprenticeship, today's journeymen and master plumbers must go through about five years of intensive classroom and on-the-job training in mathematics, hydraulics and other sciences to qualify for a license. That's because public health and sanitation, in fact civilization as we know it today, depend upon their knowing their jobs.

Past Discloses Why Russia Is Concerned

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

A look back illuminates the reasons why the Soviet Union is on edge about Red China's aims in Asia.

Moscow eagerness for a cease-fire in the India-Pakistan war reflects worry that Peking's activities can wreck Soviet world policy aims and produce chaos in Asia from which almost anything might develop.

What are Red China's aims? The Communist party paper Pravda assessed them two years ago in a searing blast at Peking's leaders. From the Kremlin standpoint, that assessment would be valid today.

According to Pravda, Red China was trying:

—To discredit, in the eyes on world Communists, the policy of peaceful coexistence as proclaimed by the Kremlin.

—To "set India at loggerheads with other Asian-African states." The implication was that this would force India into the Western camp, destroy her claim to nonalignment and give the Communist world a picture of the Soviet Union supporting a nation committed to "imperialism."

—To divorce the U.S.S.R. from the Asian-African nations and assert Red Chinese leadership over revolutionary movements, nullifying Soviet influence.

Moscow's suspicions were supported by many others, notably by Jawaharlal Nehru. Just before he died, Prime Minister Nehru told me in an interview that "China is keen on bringing about a situation in which India can no longer be considered a nonaligned nation."

Chinese-Indian frontier tension from 1959 onward led to military clashes late in 1962. The Soviet Union, haming withdrawn important economic aid from China, still was extending help to India, whose rulers Peking described as "reactionaries."

China turned savagely on the Russians.

In mid-1963, Moscow, Washington and London signed a treaty limiting nuclear tests. China denounced the Russians for "cooperating with U.S. imperialism and collaborating with India" in a struggle against the Red Chinese. Pravda retorted there was no reason for an India-China border conflict that could lead to escalated war. More than that, it was damaging world communism.

"Matters have gone so far of late that the conflict is being exploited to contaminate the atmosphere at various international forums," Pravda complained.

That is even more true today. The India-Pakistan conflict, China's role in it, Indonesia's support of Pakistan, and the fears of the rest of Asia and Africa all tend to shred the thin facade of unity of an Asian-African bloc.

China seems more determined than ever to keep the Russian foot out of the Asian-African door.

LYNNELL RAYE BASS, 17, of Virginia Beach, Va., takes regal command after being crowned Miss American Teen-Ager at Palisades Amusement Park in New Jersey. The blue-eyed blonde won the title over 48 other finalists.

A FEW OBSERVATIONS ON THE MEANING OF THE EIGHTH AMENDMENT

Even as late as 1963 the Supreme Court of Delaware continued to sanction flogging as a constitutional mode of punishment, relying upon a case decided earlier in the year in which the court stated, inter alia:

The Supreme Court, however, has not as yet held the punishment of whipping, in itself, cruel. It has spoken of it as infamous, but that it possibly true of all punishment for crime.

The Eighth Amendment expresses the revulsion of civilized man against barbarous acts -- the "cry of horror" against man's inhumanity to his fellow man. . . .We note that in Great Britain the punishment of whipping was in use until 1948, and in Canada until 1957. Its discontinuance was accomplished by legislative act, not by judicial fiat. It does not seem to us that a punishment so recently in use in the country that leads the world in the administration of justice may be held to be a barbarity that, as a matter of constitutional law, must be deemed cruel and unusual.

Furthermore, it certainly is not without significance that the abolition of whipping as a punishment for crime in those States of the Union which in the past provided for it, has uniformly been accomplished by legislative action. Counsel have not cited to us any case, nor has our own search brought one to hand, in which a court as a matter of constitutional law held the punishment to be cruel and unusual and thus prohibited. We may assume, therefore, that in those States the matter was considered one for the legislative expression of the will of the people. We think the standards of present day society are to be determined by the expressions of that society, itself, and not by an expression of the individual opinions of members of the Judiciary. This standard must be a collective one and it can be determined only by an expression of views from the people which make up that society. The only manner in which such an expression can be made is through the action of duly elected representatives of the Society whose standard is to be applied.

Pass Along Compliments

by Polly Cramer, Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Polly

DEAR POLLY—We thoroughly enjoy the benefit from the Pointers in your column and I want to pass on a Pointer which is guaranteed to bring happiness not only to the one using it but to others as well.

Try passing on a genuine compliment whenever you have a chance. It takes just a moment to call the man in the next block to tell him how much you enjoy his flowers each time you pass by, tell the church organist when you especially enjoy the music, write a note to say "thank you" to the teacher who has helped your child in some way, call the personnel director of a business to tell of an especially courteous employe. These folks usually receive complaints and are truly made happy by a compliment.—MRS. D. T.

GIRLS—How true that is. Don't we all get a lift from a bit of praise or a compliment? I did from Mrs. D. T.'s opening paragraph.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—I liked Bonnie's Pointer about using a tall coffee can (one-pound) for whipping cream, etc., and would like to suggest snapping the plastic lid on the bottom of the can while using it so as to prevent marring the work surface. An extra plastic lid left on the bottom of the can, ready for use, would also protect the storage shelf.—MARITA

DEAR POLLY—I always disliked white shoes once they were polished because I could not keep the polish off the soles and heel tips of the shoes. Now I wipe petroleum jelly on the edges of the soles before polishing the shoes. After polishing a shoe I wipe off the jelly and any stray polish comes off with it. Shoes look like new again.—MRS. J. L. T.

DEAR POLLY—Our home economics teacher taught us a simple and absolutely sure way to put in a neck zipper so it is perfectly straight. When sewing the back seam in the garment, knot, back stitch or catch the thread as usual at the notch for the opening. Then continue stitching with a long machine stitch up to the neckline. Lay this back part of the garment being made wrong side up, with the seam pressed open. Place the top of the zipper face down at the top of the blouse or dress. Lay the rest of the zipper down, little by little, carefully matching the seam line to the center of the closed zipper. Pin as you go. Baste and sew with the zipper foot. Rip open the seam back of the zipper and you have a perfect job. Remember the zipper must be closed as you put it in.—WENDY

GIRLS—This is a wonderful method for installing a zipper and I have often basted, with small stitches, the part of the seam back of the zipper that is to be ripped out. Certainly easier for older eyes than ripping out even long machine stitches.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—A car snow brush does the trick for cleaning under stoves and refrigerators.—L. C. C.

How You May
Never Take a Laxative Again!
New Miracle Regulator Keeps Waste Soft—So Bowels Move Naturally

New York, N.Y. (Special)—After 12 years' research, scientists have discovered a wonder-working substance that corrects constipation entirely without laxatives!

Doctors say most constipation occurs when waste loses moisture in the colon—becomes dry, hard, difficult to move. To give relief, laxatives have to force action by flushing, irritating or distending the intestine.

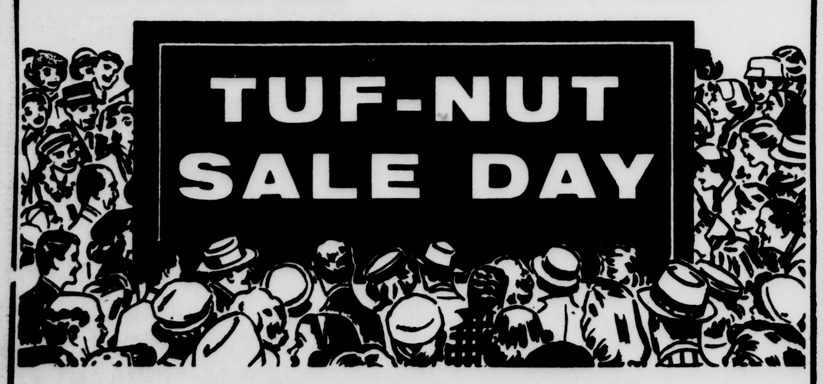

The new miracle substance—known medically as dioctyl sodium sulfosuccinate—works in a completely different way. It is not a laxative! It simply makes natural moisture in the colon moisten and soften dry, hard waste more effectively. Then normal elimination follows naturally. Thus by working only on waste, not on you, the substance corrects constipation and restores regularity as no laxative can.

This new discovery has now been made available at drugstores under the name REGUTOL. It is safe—not habit-forming. No warning on the label—no prescription needed. Try REGUTOL—discover for yourself that you may never need to take a laxative again!

How You May
Never Take a Laxative Again!
New Miracle Regulator Keeps Waste Soft—So Bowels Move Naturally

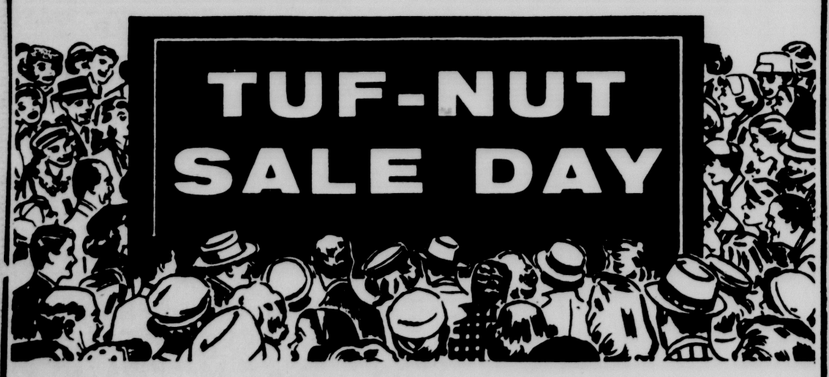

New York, N.Y. (Special)—After 12 years' research, scientists have discovered a wonder-working substance that corrects constipation entirely without laxatives!

Doctors say most constipation occurs when waste loses moisture in the colon—becomes dry, hard, difficult to move. To give relief, laxatives have to force action by flushing, irritating or distending the intestine.

The new miracle substance—known medically as dioctyl sodium sulfosuccinate—works in a completely different way. It is not a laxative! It simply makes natural moisture in the colon moisten and soften dry, hard waste more effectively. Then normal elimination follows naturally. Thus by working only on waste, not on you, the substance corrects constipation and restores regularity as no laxative can.

This new discovery has now been made available at drugstores under the name REGUTOL. It is safe—not habit-forming. No warning on the label—no prescription needed. Try REGUTOL—discover for yourself that you may never need to take a laxative again!

THE MAIL BAG

To The Editor:

The recent demise of Syngman Rhee, former President of the Republic of Korea, brought to mind a copy of a letter which this venerable man wrote in 1955 to the president of the board of directors of the National Association of Manufacturers. The warning and sage advice contained in the following letter by this "voice of experience" should be heeded by all Americans:

"Please convey to the board of directors of the National Association of Manufacturers of the United States my greetings. These greetings come from one who also believes unwaveringly in individual freedom and individual responsibility in all human activities, and one who hopes in time to see a system of free competitive enterprise create a rising standard of living for our people, as it has done so successfully among yours.

"Then may I say through you, to these great leaders of American free enterprise, that not only all of our work but all of theirs; all of their savings, all that they have built in the past and all that they hope to build in the future; these will all be destroyed in only a few more years, unless the Communist conspiracy is destroyed first.

"Say to them that 'peaceful coexistence' is an insidious fraud, and compromise with Communism is a sin, of which the wages are surely death. . ."

HOW TO REAPPORTION

I have one more solution to Missouri's redistricting problem, a solution that has been proposed for at least one other malapportioned state.

I suggest that the computer center at Missouri or Washington University be instructed to redistrict the state using the computer. The computer should be programed to make districts that are as nearly as possible square, except that they should follow natural boundaries such as roads, streets or major rivers when possible. It should be instructed to make districts varying not more than 1 per cent in population. Existing county, city or other political divisions should be disregarded.

These divisions, when completed, should be made mandatory when finished and accepted by the voters in a statewide referendum, and should be subject to change and review only by the state Supreme Court. Even then the court should not create more than a 2 per cent imbalance in any district.

To solve the problem of displaced incumbents, I suggest that, for the next election only, any eligible citizen be allowed to be a candidate for office in any district in the state that he chooses, the only condition being that he cannot be a candidate for more than one office or in more than one district.

FORT HOOD, TEX. (AHTNC) Army Sergeant First Class James L. Keeing, son of Mrs. Bektic L. Keeling, Route 3, Portageville, Mo., was assigned to the 2d Armored Division at Fort Hood, Tex., Aug. 28.

Keeing, a platoon sergeant in Company C of the division's 17th Engineer Battalion, entered the Army in 1940 and was last stationed in Korea.

His father, John L. Keeing, lives in Moreland, Ark. His wife, Leonora, lives in Copperas Cove, Tex.

BLYTHEVILLE AFB, ARK., Sept. 10-- The 97th Bomb Wing recently passed an operational readiness inspection which was conducted by the Second Air Force inspector general team.

The team, led by Colonel James M. Smith, consisted of 33 persons, two of which were formally assigned to the 97th.

During the inspection, almost every shop on base was visited by the inspectors, and the overall results were considered good. The backbone of the inspection however, was the flying and maintenance portion.

Highlighting the flying portion were performances by the 97th Air Refueling Squadron. According to Major Wilton G. Weaver, squadron commander, "We couldn't have done better. Everything was perfect from flying to individual crew testing."

During the inspection critique, Lieutenant General David Wade, 2nd AF commander, gave special praise to the 97th Airborne Missile Maintenance Squadron for its overall efficiency.

Lieutenant Colonel Ben M.D. Newsom, 97th AMMS commander, said, "We can all be especially proud of this achievement."

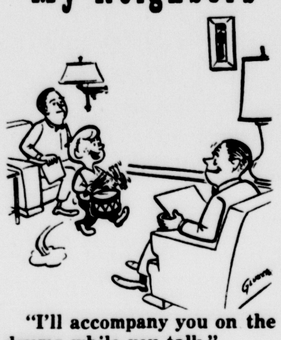

Colonel John W. Livingston, 97th Bomb Wing commander, gave his personal congratulations to the 97th Bomb Wing members following the critique.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (AHTNC) -- WAC Pvt. Evelyn L. Payne, daughter of Orville R. Payne, 201 Applegate st., Sikeston, Mo., was assigned as a medical records clerk at the Walter Reed General Hospital in Washington, D. C., Aug. 28.

Avalanche of Young Voters To Have Political Impact

BY BRUCE BIOSSAT
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) In the next three presidential elections up through 1976, some 38 million Americans now age 10 to 20 will come of voting age. The political effects of this avalanche of the young are bound to be immense.

The oldest of these new eligibles will have been born in the year World War II ended. They will have no first-hand memory of the war, of the catastrophic events preceding it, or of the Great Depression.

The youngest will know only what they read of the Cold War's beginning, Yugoslav President Tito's break with Moscow, the Berlin blockade, the Korean War, the French war in Viet Nam.

Their experience with American presidents, as of now, is limited to Harry S. Truman, Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

NO SERIOUS STUDENT of population imagines that when this avalanche of young people begins cascading into the voting booths it will hit with monolithic force.

In other words, there will not be—in the view of one such expert—a "youth bloc."

Like everybody else's, the interests and attitudes of young voters are extremely varied, reflecting differences of religion, race, economic status, family and cultural background, geography. The young ones generally should break into many groupings.

This does not mean they will be carbon copies of their elders. Their judgments of the great world struggle with Russia and China will be affected by the fact that some of this country's harshest events are unknown to them except as history. They will never have seen the nation in dire general economic distress.

They may or may not tend to favor "one of their own" for high office. Since the rise of the Kennedys, it is almost part of Washington folklore to assume young voters will prefer young candidates, or at least those of youthful appearance and outlook. But at least one election specialist rates this largely nonsense.

BOTH MAJOR PARTIES are keenly aware of the rising need to fathom the minds of young voters and find ways of winning their support.

Since the debacle of 1964, in which youthful voters came down heavily against Barry Goldwater, the Republicans particularly have been talking steadily about new appeals to the young. They are struck by the diminishing median age of the population.

Right now roughly half the country's 195 million people are below 28 years of age. The median may well go on declining to a point around 25 by 1980 and 1985.

CERTAINLY, HOWEVER, the politicians are going to have to attend sharply to the 38 millions who will swell the ranks of voter eligibles in the next 11 years—even though young people on balance are less likely to vote than their elders.

Their descent on the voting scene will be a major phenomenon. But they are not likely to engulf and overwhelm the rest of the electorate—or to control the national choices.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I wish you'd stop telling us married women to thank God our husbands are still alive and to pick up the phone and invite a widow to a party.

If YOU want to do the widows a favor, Ann Landers, please print these helpful hints on how to get along:

1. Be self-sufficient, widows. Don't expect your brothers, neighbors, cousins and friends to drive you to the market, the cleaners, the doctor, the post office or to church like your husband did.

2. If you are invited to join another couple, please sit in the back seat. Don't plunk yourself in the front beside the husband.

3. When we invite you to dinner, please don't do all the talking. Our husbands are tired. They would rather read or listen to a ball game.

4. Please drop the phrase, "When Sidney was alive." It's depressing. If your husband-less females would pay attention to some of these hints perhaps you wouldn't be so lonely. --OUTSPOKEN

Dear Outspoken: I expect I'll be hearing from a few widows as a result of your letter. Any comments, ladies?

Dear Ann Landers: I used to think only a creep would write to Ann Landers but I guess everybody writes to you sooner or later when they need someone to talk to. Please tell me what to do about this certain girl. I'll call her Jane although that isn't her real name.

We went steady for four months. She was a real sweet kid, but a little square, I thought. Very hipped on religion and like that.

Jane doesn't know too much about sports, which is what I am interested in mainly, so we mostly necked. She didn't put up much of an argument when we went from one thing to the next because I told her if a girl really cares about a fellow she should be willing to prove it.

I'm ashamed to tell you I got to go all the way two weeks ago. I felt like a heel and took her straight home. I haven't called her since because I don't know what to say. Frankly, I'd be happy if she moved out of town or at least switched schools so I wouldn't have to see her again.

Why do I feel so lousy about this? It wasn't Jane's fault. It was mine. But I keep telling myself if she was the right kind of girl she would have stopped me. Am I nuts or what? --TOM

Dear Tom: You aren't nuts. You're a boy with a guilty conscience. Jane allowed you to do something that made you think poorly of yourself and now you want nothing to do with her.

What you did was not only morally wrong and potentially dangerous but also inconsiderate and selfish. I hope you have learned from this experience that sex is not a plaything.

Dear Ann Landers: My parents were born in Eastern Europe and I'm afraid some of their old country ideas will ruin my life.

I am 26 years old and have been going with a fine man for four years. We want to be married but my parents say I cannot marry until my older sister does. They insist that when a younger sister marries first, it spoils the older sister's chances.

I should tell you that my sister is 31. She has no interest in men and I suspect she never will have. Of course I can't tell my folks this and neither can she. Please give me some level-headed advice. PAYING

THE MAIL BAG

To The Editor:

The recent demise of Syngman Rhee, former President of the Republic of Korea, brought to mind a copy of a letter which this venerable man wrote in 1955 to the president of the board of directors of the National Association of Manufacturers. The warning and sage advice contained in the following letter by this "voice of experience" should be heeded by all Americans:

"Please convey to the board of directors of the National Association of Manufacturers of the United States my greetings. These greetings come from one who also believes unwaveringly in individual freedom and individual responsibility in all human activities, and one who hopes in time to see a system of free competitive enterprise create a rising standard of living for our people, as it has done so successfully among yours.

"Then may I say through you, to these great leaders of American free enterprise, that not only all of our work but all of theirs; all of their savings, all that they have built in the past and all that they hope to build in the future; these will all be destroyed in only a few more years, unless the Communist conspiracy is destroyed first.

"Say to them that 'peaceful coexistence' is an insidious fraud, and compromise with Communism is a sin, of which the wages are surely death. . ."

HOW TO REAPPORTION

I have one more solution to Missouri's redistricting problem, a solution that has been proposed for at least one other malapportioned state.

I suggest that the computer center at Missouri or Washington University be instructed to redistrict the state using the computer. The computer should be programed to make districts that are as nearly as possible square, except that they should follow natural boundaries such as roads, streets or major rivers when possible. It should be instructed to make districts varying not more than 1 per cent in population. Existing county, city or other political divisions should be disregarded.

These divisions, when completed, should be made mandatory when finished and accepted by the voters in a statewide referendum, and should be subject to change and review only by the state Supreme Court. Even then the court should not create more than a 2 per cent imbalance in any district.

To solve the problem of displaced incumbents, I suggest that, for the next election only, any eligible citizen be allowed to be a candidate for office in any district in the state that he chooses, the only condition being that he cannot be a candidate for more than one office or in more than one district.

FORT HOOD, TEX. (AHTNC) Army Sergeant First Class James L. Keeing, son of Mrs. Bektic L. Keeling, Route 3, Portageville, Mo., was assigned to the 2d Armored Division at Fort Hood, Tex., Aug. 28.

Keeing, a platoon sergeant in Company C of the division's 17th Engineer Battalion, entered the Army in 1940 and was last stationed in Korea.

His father, John L. Keeing, lives in Moreland, Ark. His wife, Leonora, lives in Copperas Cove, Tex.

BLYTHEVILLE AFB, ARK., Sept. 10-- The 97th Bomb Wing recently passed an operational readiness inspection which was conducted by the Second Air Force inspector general team.

The team, led by Colonel James M. Smith, consisted of 33 persons, two of which were formally assigned to the 97th.

During the inspection, almost every shop on base was visited by the inspectors, and the overall results were considered good. The backbone of the inspection however, was the flying and maintenance portion.

Highlighting the flying portion were performances by the 97th Air Refueling Squadron. According to Major Wilton G. Weaver, squadron commander, "We couldn't have done better. Everything was perfect from flying to individual crew testing."

During the inspection critique, Lieutenant General David Wade, 2nd AF commander, gave special praise to the 97th Airborne Missile Maintenance Squadron for its overall efficiency.

Lieutenant Colonel Ben M.D. Newsom, 97th AMMS commander, said, "We can all be especially proud of this achievement."

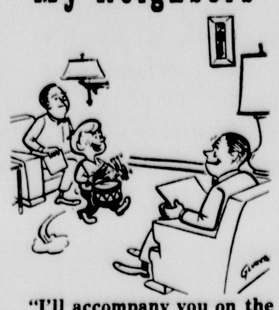

Colonel John W. Livingston, 97th Bomb Wing commander, gave his personal congratulations to the 97th Bomb Wing members following the critique.

Avalanche of Young Voters To Have Political Impact

BY BRUCE BIOSSAT
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) In the next three presidential elections up through 1976, some 38 million Americans now age 10 to 20 will come of voting age. The political effects of this avalanche of the young are bound to be immense.

The oldest of these new eligibles will have been born in the year World War II ended. They will have no first-hand memory of the war, of the catastrophic events preceding it, or of the Great Depression.

The youngest will know only what they read of the Cold War's beginning, Yugoslav President Tito's break with Moscow, the Berlin blockade, the Korean War, the French war in Viet Nam.

Their experience with American presidents, as of now, is limited to Harry S. Truman, Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

NO SERIOUS STUDENT of population imagines that when this avalanche of young people begins cascading into the voting booths it will hit with monolithic force.

In other words, there will not be—in the view of one such expert—a "youth bloc."

Like everybody else's, the interests and attitudes of young voters are extremely varied, reflecting differences of religion, race, economic status, family and cultural background, geography. The young ones generally should break into many groupings.

This does not mean they will be carbon copies of their elders. Their judgments of the great world struggle with Russia and China will be affected by the fact that some of this country's harshest events are unknown to them except as history. They will never have seen the nation in dire general economic distress.

They may or may not tend to favor "one of their own" for high office. Since the rise of the Kennedys, it is almost part of Washington folklore to assume young voters will prefer young candidates, or at least those of youthful appearance and outlook. But at least one election specialist rates this largely nonsense.

BOTH MAJOR PARTIES are keenly aware of the rising need to fathom the minds of young voters and find ways of winning their support.

Since the debacle of 1964, in which youthful voters came down heavily against Barry Goldwater, the Republicans particularly have been talking steadily about new appeals to the young. They are struck by the diminishing median age of the population.

Right now roughly half the country's 195 million people are below 28 years of age. The median may well go on declining to a point around 25 by 1980 and 1985.

CERTAINLY, HOWEVER, the politicians are going to have to attend sharply to the 38 millions who will swell the ranks of voter eligibles in the next 11 years—even though young people on balance are less likely to vote than their elders.

Their descent on the voting scene will be a major phenomenon. But they are not likely to engulf and overwhelm the rest of the electorate—or to control the national choices.
